

Thieu Predicts Housing and Food Stamp Budget Face Big Reductions Shift

SAIGON (AP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu said today the enemy has lost the military part of the Vietnam war and has turned to politics to recoup.

He made the statement at a Senate reception after telling the National Assembly the enemy has failed in every attempt to bring "disastrous consequences" to South Vietnam in 1968. "They know they cannot win militarily so they move to the political phase," Thieu commented to newsmen. "Now they would like to use what they still have to consolidate the political area."

It was the first time Thieu has stated flatly that he thinks the enemy has lost militarily. He has repeatedly stressed that the South Vietnamese people and government should gird for a political struggle that would follow the military battles.

Thieu said the enemy was preparing for the political fight by training more cadre "among the people in the countryside." He added that he had no fear President Johnson would call a full bombing halt over North Vietnam before the Nov. 5 U.S. presidential election.

"I don't have a worry with President Johnson because he has discussed it at length with me," he said.

Thieu also said he did not think any of the U.S. presidential candidates would call a full bombing halt without demanding reciprocal action from Hanoi. They know, he said, that a nonreciprocal bombing halt "would bring more disadvantages than advantages."

Thieu said there were no plans for an allied summit meeting before the U.S. elections, but said he would "like to meet with President Johnson and the elected president to discuss the relations of our two countries."

Thieu said his government was determined to have its armed forces take over a major share of the fighting "to help the allied countries to solve their problems about sending men to Vietnam." He reiterated his belief that allied forces could begin a gradual phaseout at the end of 1969.

In his speech to the National Assembly, marking the first anniversary of the creation of that body, Thieu said the only way peace can be realized is for Hanoi to acknowledge its aggression and agree to abandon its attempts to take over South Vietnam.

"The most favorable way to end this war is for both sides to scale down the level of hostilities leading gradually to a cease-fire effectively controlled and guaranteed," he said.

Speaking in the Senate chamber with Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky and Premier Tran Van Huong in attendance, Thieu emphasized that he believes South Vietnam is militarily and politically gaining the upper hand in the war.

"I reaffirm today that we will not concede any portion of our territory to the Communist aggressors, and we will not accept any form of coalition with the Communists," he said.

He said Hanoi had agreed to preliminary talks in Paris, but he added "the Communist aggressors have a greater responsibility to de-escalate this war than we, the defenders. By refusing to respond to our gesture of goodwill in de-escalating this war, the Communists are obstructing the peace talks."

3 Tape Players Taken, Several Accidents Occur

Three stereo tape players were stolen during the weekend from individual's automobiles, Sikeston police reported today. Mrs. Steve Bell, 822 North Ranney St., reported to police at 11:59 a.m. Saturday that her car had been broken into Friday night and a Tenna Tape player valued at $89.95 had been taken. Also taken were 10 tapes valued at $6.95 each, four twin back tapes valued at $9.98 each, and a tape carrier valued at $7.95.

Mrs. Calvin Presley, 217 Hardin St., reported to police at 1:13 p.m. Saturday that her car was broken into either at home or at the football game Friday night in Sikeston, and a tape player valued at $250 was stolen.

David Moyers, 610 Dempster St., reported to police at 8:35 p.m. Saturday that his tape player was stolen from his car. In other activity, police were called to investigate two possible bad checks taken Saturday afternoon at the Sikeston IGA Foodliner. Police are investigating today.

Charles F. Collum, manager of Liberty Supermarket, showed police Sunday night a check a man had attempted to pass. The man left when questioned and failed to pass the check. Collum also told police he had about $35 in bad checks taken at the store. Police advised Collum to see the prosecuting attorney.

Sam Berry, 240 Berry, reported to police at 9:53 p.m. Sunday that someone threw a brick through the window of his car as he was driving east on West Malone near the 21 Club.

Sgt. Thurman Burns discovered a break-in at 2:30 a.m. Sunday at John's Auto & Tractor Supply Store, 131 West Malone, where $25 in petty cash was missing. Entry had been gained by breaking in a rear door, police reported.

James Lee Ferguson, 349 School St., and Thomas Ralph Harmon, 613 Tanner St., were each charged Saturday with public intoxication.

Claude Sassen, Charleston, William Stover, 430 Murray Lane, and Emma Owen, 904 Ruth St., were each charged this morning with running a stop sign.

J. H. Ellis, 508 Murray Lane, was charged today with improper parking on School St. Tevis Noles Jr., 17, 219 Sunday to be with her.

Carol Wiss

Miss Carol Wiss, 21, student at Concordia College, Seward, Neb., was injured in a car accident there Sunday.

She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Wiss, 612 Dorothy, and is a senior in the Lutheran college at Seward.

She was in a car with four other girls when the accident occurred. She suffered a head injury, requiring surgery, but was reported to be recovering satisfactorily.

Hurt in Mishap

Wallace drew a line between opposition to U.S. involvement in Vietnam and speeches calling for a Communist victory in the war. One, he suggested, is legitimate dissent, the other "an overt act of treason."

To those who raise money for what he called Communist causes, who fly the Viet Cong flag, and who chant in honor of North Vietnam's President Ho Chi Minh, Wallace said, "I say it is treason."

The former Alabama governor spoke at a United Press International newspaper editors conference where he pledged, if president, he would never use nuclear weapons except in self-defense after an atomic attack.

Wallace said the way to prevent nuclear warfare is to maintain such a strong U.S. superiority in nuclear weapons that no other nation would dare attack.

He renewed his call for a military victory in Vietnam if the Paris talks are unsuccessful, but said, "I would not consider nuclear war at all in Vietnam."

Wallace was accompanied by his newly chosen running mate, Gen. Curtis LeMay, retired Air Force general as he lead off a triple headed series of speeches by presidential candidates at the conference. Wallace is to be followed within the next day by Republican Richard M. Nixon and Democrat Hubert H. Humphrey.

Wallace Pins Treason Tag On Red Sympathizers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential candidate George C. Wallace flung a treason charge today at antiwar demonstrators who fly the Viet Cong flag and march to chants of "Ho, Ho, Ho Chi Minh."

Senate Split on Bombing

WASHINGTON (AP) — At least half the Senate favors one plan or another to halt U.S. bombing of North Vietnam.

Twenty-seven senators of the 85 who responded to an Associated Press survey said they favor an unconditional bombing halt. They are opposed by 18 senators who said there should be no further bombing reduction in the current stage of the war.

In between were 23 senators who said they would insist on some matching action by Hanoi, either in reducing the level of the fighting or in compromises at the bargaining table in Paris.

The 18 who oppose any reduction of the air predicted that a bombing halt would result in wholesale military infiltration from the North and stepped up, costly ground action in the South by Communist units taking advantage of a toothless American air dragon.

The senators who said they want the bombing halted unconditionally—at least on an experimental basis—maintained it would be an acceptable risk in an all-out attempt to end the fighting.

The AP survey was conducted after the flurry of congressional and political debate sparked by Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey's Sept. 30 Vietnam policy speech.

Humphrey said that as president he would consider stopping all bombing "as an acceptable risk for peace." He said that before acting he would "place key importance on evidence—direct or indirect, by deed or word—of Communist willingness to restore the demilitarized zone between North and South Vietnam."

He said that should the Hanoi government "show bad faith, I would reserve the right to resume the bombing."

All senators contacted were asked: "Do you presently favor a halt in the bombing of North Vietnam, either unconditionally or predicated on Hanoi's advance assurances of a reciprocal gesture?"

Seventeen of those contacted declined to comment. Fifteen others—many of them on the campaign trail—could not be reached.

Two remarks appeared to indicate the depth of division still remaining in the Senate which, if the issue arose, might be consulted by the White House but would have no direct policy making role.

"I would favor an unconditional bombing halt with no ifs, ands or buts," said Sen. John O. Pastore, D-R.I. "I would also reserve the option to resume the bombing if they show any signs of taking military advantage of it."

"I think Vice President Humphrey's approach—with its ifs, ands and buts and hopefully reciprocal signs from Hanoi—will do nothing but muddy the waters, is too hypothetical for a stable response from Hanoi and really serves no useful purpose," declared Sen. Wallace F. Bennett, R-Utah.

Aides to Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, D-Minn., referred reporters to position papers issued this summer by McCarthy when—as a candidate for his party's presidential nomination—he became the leading symbol of those determined to end the war.

McCarthy proposed then an unconditional bombing halt as part of a total program to end the fighting and bring stability to the area.

Parallel proposals, differing somewhat in emphasis and detail, have been forwarded by Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and George S. McGovern, D-S.D.

On the other side of the issue in Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., who said he favors "turning the Vietnam matter over to the military and giving it a free hand."

Open House At Fire Station

The Sikeston fire department will have open house from 9 a.m. until 10 p.m. daily this week at fire station one, 405 West Malone.

This is Fire Prevention Week. School children will tour the fire station throughout the week.

Each day at 6 p.m. a house will be burned for demonstration purposes and drill in the 300 block of Cresap Street, Fire Chief L. D. M. Ramsey said.

Free coffee, doughnuts and Cokes will be served at the fire station.

Soviet Intervention Denounced

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — France asserted today there can be no East-West detente as long as Soviet troops remain in Czechoslovakia.

In a sharp condemnation of the Soviet Union, French Foreign Minister Michel Debre told the 125-nation General Assembly the Soviet military intervention in Czechoslovakia last August "marked another dark day in postwar history."

He said cooperation between Western and Eastern Europe is vital to peace "and there is no detente that can accommodate itself to the occupation troops stationed by force."

"Only the departure of these troops," he said, "and the rejection of all measures inspired by the fatal policy of blocs—whatever name one may give it—can prevent, for Europe first, then for the world, the a gravation of the current tension created by the event in August."

Debre said it had been suggested that the Soviet decision to intervene in Czechoslovakia was due to fears of a new military resurgence in West Germany. He minimized this danger, however, and expressed France's continued confidence in the Bonn government.

Noting France's close cooperation with West Germany in the postwar years, he said: "France, as aware as anyone of the demands of her security, is certain of having chosen the true path, the only path that can bring peace and calm. The attacks, the threats jeopardize that evolution."

Housing and Food Stamp Budget Face Big Reductions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Appropriations Committee today cut deeply from the administration's request for funds to launch its new low-income housing program, and to expand the food stamp program.

Also sharply trimmed by the committee were requests for money to enable the administration to enforce the new open housing law, and for a juvenile delinquency control program.

The cuts were made in the final appropriations bill of the year, which the committee reduced from $270 million requested by the administration to $101 million.

In a report accompanying the bill, the committee said it "is not impressed with the urgency of all the programs and has provided only for those that are most important."

The House, scheduled to take the bill up Tuesday, is likely to go along with nearly all the recommended cuts.

Chief casualties were the food stamp program, which Congress recently expanded, and the new housing program designed to increase home ownership among low and moderate income families and make more rental housing available to them.

President Johnson asked for $80 million in additional funds for the food stamp program, which helps poor families get more food for their money.

Congress recently authorized that much of an increase, but the committee trimmed the appropriation itself to $20 million. The funds would be in addition to $225 million already appropriated for this fiscal year.

Under the new housing program the federal government helps pay the interest costs on building low-income housing.

Johnson asked for $11.5 million, sufficient to contract for $50 million worth of such housing this year, but the committee recommended spending only $5 million, which would limit contract authority to $50 million.

For enforcing the open housing provision of the new civil rights law enacted this year, Johnson asked for $8 million for the Department of Housing and Urban Development. But the committee cut the amount to $1 million.

The Justice Department also requested $300,000 to carry out its role in enforcing open housing, but the entire sum was eliminated by the committee.

A $19.2 million request for a new juvenile delinquency control and prevention program was trimmed to $5 million by the committee. Grants under the program would help finance comprehensive planning by states and local agencies.

The bill, which would appropriate funds mainly for new programs enacted by Congress since the original budget estimates were submitted.

The committee eliminated completely 12 requests for funds for other programs under the new housing legislation.

The programs for which no money was provided include grants to provide more services for public housing tenants and for area-wide planning for metropolitan development.

The committee also disallowed a $1.5 million request for launching a new program of flood insurance.

Three stereo tape players were stolen during the weekend from individual's automobiles, Sikeston police reported today.

Mrs. Steve Bell, 822 North Ranney St., reported to police at 11:59 a.m. Saturday that her car had been broken into Friday night and a Tenna Tape player valued at $89.95 had been taken. Also taken were 10 tapes valued at $6.95 each, four twin back tapes valued at $9.98 each, and a tape carrier valued at $7.95.

Mrs. Calvin Presley, 217 Hardin St., reported to police at 1:13 p.m. Saturday that her car was broken into either at home or at the football game Friday night in Sikeston, and a tape player valued at $250 was stolen.

David Moyers, 610 Dempster St., reported to police at 8:35 p.m. Saturday that his tape player was stolen from his car.

In other activity, police were called to investigate two possible bad checks taken Saturday afternoon at the Sikeston IGA Foodliner. Police are investigating today.

Charles F. Collum, manager of Liberty Supermarket, showed police Sunday night a check a man had attempted to pass. The man left when questioned and failed to pass the check. Collum also told police he had about $35 in bad checks taken at the store. Police advised Collum to see the prosecuting attorney.

Sam Berry, 240 Berry, reported to police at 9:53 p.m. Sunday that someone threw a brick through the window of his car as he was driving east on West Malone near the 21 Club.

Sgt. Thurman Burns discovered a break-in at 2:30 a.m. Sunday at John's Auto & Tractor Supply Store, 131 West Malone, where $25 in petty cash was missing. Entry had been gained by breaking in a rear door, police reported.

James Lee Ferguson, 349 School St., and Thomas Ralph Harmon, 613 Tanner St., were each charged Saturday with public intoxication.

Claude Sassen, Charleston, William Stover, 430 Murray Lane, and Emma Owen, 904 Ruth St., were each charged this morning with running a stop sign.

J. H. Ellis, 508 Murray Lane, was charged today with improper parking on School St.

Tevis Noles Jr., 17, 219

Watson St., was charged Sunday with careless and imprudent driving. The car he was driving struck the rear of an automobile driven by Reginald Dean Stotts, 17, 301 Broadway in the 300 block of Helen St. at 2:10 p.m. Sunday, police reported.

Perry Allen Powers, 18, 800 Ruth St., was charged by police at 4:35 p.m. Sunday with failure to yield the right of way. The automobile he was driving collided at School and Malone streets with a car driven by Nancy Keller, 801 Ruth St., police reported.

An automobile driven by Dickie Derosh, 18, 807 East Kathleen, had to be towed away Saturday night after the right front end of the vehicle went into a trench on Kathleen street near Maple, police reported.

A car driven by Hugh C. Holz, 22, 700 South Kingshighway, collided with an automobile driven by Daniel Ray Maloney, 16, 307 Dorothy St., at 12:08 p.m. Sunday at South Kingshighway and Murray Lane. The accident occurred as Maloney drove across Kingshighway into the path of the Holz vehicle, police reported.

A truck driven by Kenneth M. Stanfield, 45, St. Louis, skidded on wet pavement on South Main St. near Reiss Dairy at 3:05 p.m. Sunday and struck a white way pole, police reported.

Nellie Collier, 111 North Scott St., reported to police at 11:50 a.m. Saturday that her son's purple bicycle valued at $49 was stolen.

Carol Wiss

Hurt in Mishap

Miss Carol Wiss, 21, student at Concordia College, Seward, Neb., was injured in a car accident there Sunday.

She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Wiss, 612 Dorothy, and is a senior in the Lutheran college at Seward.

She was in a car with four other girls, when the accident occurred. She suffered a head injury, requiring surgery, but was reported to be recovering satisfactorily.

Soviet Intervention Denounced

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — France asserted today there can be no East-West detente as long as Soviet troops remain in Czechoslovakia.

In a sharp condemnation of the Soviet Union, French Foreign Minister Michel Debre told the 125-nation General Assembly the Soviet military intervention in Czechoslovakia last August "marked another dark day in postwar history."

He said cooperation between Western and Eastern Europe is vital to peace "and there is no detente that can accommodate itself to the occupation troops stationed by force."

"Only the departure of these troops," he said, "and the rejection of all measures inspired by the fatal policy of blocs—whatever name one may give it—can prevent, for Europe first, then for the world, the a gravation of the current tension created by the event in August."

Debre said it had been suggested that the Soviet decision to intervene in Czechoslovakia was due to fears of a new militarist resurgence in West Germany. He minimized this danger, however, and expressed France's continued confidence in the Bonn government.

Noting France's close cooperation with West Germany in the postwar years, he said: "France, as aware as anyone of the demands of her security, is certain of having chosen the true path, the only path that can bring peace and calm. The attacks, the threats jeopardize that evolution."

Vandals Strike at Vanduser

VANDUSER — Vandals did about $300 worth of damage in a break-in at the Vanduser school during the weekend, Sheriff John Dennis said today.

Entry was gained by breaking a window.

Locks were broken off doors to gain entry into classrooms, where papers were scattered on the floor. Two vending machines were broken into but it is believed that no money was taken.

Four Juveniles Arrested After Burglaries

CHAFFEE — Four juveniles were picked up Saturday morning in connection with four burglaries here in the last three weeks, Sheriff John Dennis reported today.

The breaks were at the Catholic, Christian and Methodist churches and Burton's Grocery. Speakers which had been taken from the churches' public address systems and most of the other items taken in the breaks were recovered by authorities, the sheriff said.

Three youths are from Chaffee and the other from Oran. All are aged 14 to 16. They were turned over to juvenile authorities.

Federal Aid Sought for Cape Hospital

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The State Department of Community Affairs announced today it is seeking federal aid for construction of a proposed new $6.5 million St. Francis Hospital in Cape Girardeau.

At the request of State Sen. Albert M. Spradling, D-Cape Girardeau, the agency is trying to get the Farmers Home Administration to provide mortgage insurance for the proposed 160-bed hospital under the 1968 Housing and Urban Development Act.

Local funds amounting to $1 million are available for the non-profit project, and the rest would be sought from a private lender.

Jackson Man Killed in Crash At Cape Girardeau City Limits

John William Howard, 40, kidney, in a one-car accident route three, Jackson, was killed Saturday at 8 p.m. on route C, in a two-car collision on highway three-tenths mile south of 61, at the north city limits of Forhna.

He lost control of his car, ran down an embankment and overturned.

He was taken to Perry County Memorial hospital in Perruville.

Two were treated by Portageville physicians for injuries received Sunday at 11:55 a.m. at a street intersection in Portageville.

A 1968 Cadillac, driven by Ruby Wrathe, 59, Portageville, failed to stop at a street intersection the patrol said and pulled into the path of a 1952 Dodge, driven by Daniel Faries, 19, Portageville.

Louise Hawkins, Portageville, passenger in the Wrathe car, was bruised in her right forearm.

A 1966 Corvair, driven by Bennie Yount, 21, St. Louis, then struck the Behrs car, and a 1963 Ford, driven by Lora Kinder, 21, Cape Girardeau, struck the Yount car in the rear.

Behrs was cut on the left leg, and yount, cut on the forehead. They were taken to St. Francis hospital in Cape Girardeau.

Roger Dale Sherrill, 19, Forhna, received a bruised

Community hospital in Sikeston. Walker was given a summons for driving while intoxicated, the patrol said.

Four were injured in a two-car collision, Sunday at 9:30 a.m. at the junction of highway 61 and 80 near Matthews.

A 1966 Chevrolet, driven by Billy Joe O'Brien, 42, St. Louis, pulled in front of a 1955 Ford, driven by James W. Lashley, 57, West Plains, the patrol said.

Injured in the Lashley car all of West Plains, were the driver, cuts on his head, Doria Lashley, 21, cuts on the head, and Charles Richardson, 48, with a dislocated shoulder.

Injured in the O'Brien car were Ernest Smith, 77, Matthews, head injury.

All were taken to the Missouri Delta Community hospital.

O'Brien was given a summons for failure to yield right-of-way, the patrol said.

An Ironton man, Ben Weiss, 771, driver of a 1965 Ford, received bruises on the forehead, Sunday at 6:25 a.m. on Interstate 55, seven miles south of Sikeston.

His car ran off the highway, struck a bridge and went out into a field.

Two passengers, William Surface, 36, and Marshall Surface, 16, both of Bell City, were cut on the head, and taken to the Missouri Delta

The protesters waded into a crowd of soldiers just back from Vietnam, tempers flared quickly, and three demonstrators were arrested.

In this case Texas is trying to revive its "disturbing of peace" law, held unconstitutional last April by a federal court in Austin.

Though the justices have declined to rule on the legality of the Vietnam war, major disputes spawned by the war are before the Court.

The speeded-up draft of war protesters who turn in their draft cards is under attack in an appeal that has split the government.

The Justice Department has conceded such reclassification as draft status may be unconstitutional. The Selective Service system says the procedure is rooted in draft law, meanwhile, are trying to upset the 1966 law that permitted President Johnson to call them to active duty without a declaration of war or national emergency.

And three Des Moines, Iowa, teenagers are fighting for the right to protest the war by wearing black armbands to school.

A growing list of "poor people" cases reflect the new emphasis civil rights and civil liberties groups are putting on economic advances.

At the top is a set of challenges to laws and regulations in 41 states that prohibit welfare assistance to newly migrated poor people. If they are held unconstitutional, the states would have to yield $140 million to $200 million to more than 100,000 poor people.

Wallace Pins Treason Tag On Red Sympathizers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential candidate George C. Wallace flung a treason charge today at antiwar demonstrators who fly the Viet Cong flag and march to chants of "Ho, Ho, Ho Chi Minh."

Wallace drew a line between opposition to U.S. involvement in Vietnam and speeches calling for a Communist victory in the war. One, he suggested, is legitimate dissent, the other "an overt act of treason."

To those who raise money for what he called Communist causes, who fly the Viet Cong flag, and who chant in honor of North Vietnam's President Ho Chi Minh, Wallace said, "I say it is treason."

The former Alabama governor spoke at a United Press International newspaper editors conference where he pledged, if president, he would never use nuclear weapons except in self-defense after an atomic attack.

Wallace said the way to prevent nuclear warfare is to maintain such a strong U.S. superiority in nuclear weapons that no other nation would dare attack.

He renewed his call for a military victory in Vietnam if the Paris talks are unsuccessful, but said, "I would not consider nuclear war at all in Vietnam."

Wallace was accompanied by his newly chosen running mate, Gen. Curtis LeMay, retired Air Force general as he lead off a triple headed series of speeches by presidential candidates at the conference. Wallace is to be followed within the next day by Republican Richard M. Nixon and Democrat Hubert H. Humphrey.

Howard Harper and Evelyn Kay Harper, injured in car accident.

The peppery speaker chided newspaper editors for their attitude toward his presidential campaign and told his hearers if he could be labeled a racist, so could they.

Wallace said, "everyone of you has been called a racist" by the Kerner commission, a reference to the National Commission on Civil Disorders, headed by former Gov. Otto Kerner of Illinois.

That commission, the independent candidate for president said, had blamed newspapers for a breakdown in law and order.

He said, "If everybody in this country is a racist who had been charged to be a racist, then we have a room full of racists."

He noted the large crowds he has drawn in his speaking appearances. He said that if the only people who support him are redneck working men, the nation has millions.

Car Accidents

Injure Seven

Seven of eight treated at the Missouri Delta Community hospital over the weekend were for injuries in car accidents.

Treated Saturday were James Walter Lashley, Doris Joe Lashley, Ada F. Richardson and Ida P. Richardson, all of West Plains, were treated for injuries in a car accident; Randy Joe Coleman, injured in fall from bunk bed.

Howard Harper and Evelyn Kay Harper, injured in car accident.

On the other side of the issue in Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., who said he favors "turning the Vietnam matter over to the military and giving it a free hand."

Senate Split on Bombing

WASHINGTON (AP) — At least half the Senate favors one plan or another to halt U.S. bombing of North Vietnam.

Twenty-seven senators of the 85 who responded to an Associated Press survey said they favor an unconditional bombing halt. They are opposed by 18 senators who said there should be no further bombing reduction in the current stage of the war.

In between were 23 senators who said they would insist on some matching action by Hanoi, either in reducing the level of the fighting or in compromises at the bargaining table in Paris.

The 18 who oppose any reduction of the air predicted that a bombing halt would result in wholesale military infiltration from the North and stepped up, costly ground action in the South by Communist units taking advantage of a toothless American air dragon.

The senators who said they want the bombing halted unconditionally—zone between experimental basis—maintained it would be an acceptable risk in an all-out attempt to end the fighting.

The AP survey was conducted after the flurry of congressional and political debate sparked by Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey's Sept. 30 Vietnam policy speech.

Humphrey said that as president he would consider stopping all bombing "as an acceptable risk for peace." He said that before acting he would "place key importance on evidence—direct or indirect, by deed or word—of Communist willingness to restore the demilitarized zone between North and South Vietnam."

He said that should the Hanoi government "show bad faith, I would reserve the right to resume the bombing."

All senators contacted were asked: "Do you presently favor a halt in the bombing of North Vietnam, either unconditionally or predicated on Hanoi's advance assurances of a reciprocal gesture?"

Seventeen of those contacted declined to comment. Fifteen others—many of them on the campaign trail—could not be reached.

Two remarks appeared to indicate the depth of division still remaining in the Senate which, if the issue arose, might be consulted by the White House but would have no direct policy making role.

"I would favor an unconditional bombing halt with no ifs, ands or buts," said Sen. John O. Pastore, D-R.I. "I would also reserve the option to resume the bombing if they show any signs of taking military advantage of it."

"I think Vice President Humphrey's approach—with its ifs, ands and buts and hopefully reciprocal signs from Hanoi—does nothing but muddy the waters, is too hypothetical for a stable response from Hanoi and really serves no useful purpose," declared Sen. Wallace F. Bennett, R-Utah.

Aides to Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, D-Minn., referred reporters to position papers issued this summer by McCarthy when—as a candidate for his party's presidential nomination—he became the leading symbol of those determined to end the war.

McCarthy proposed then an unconditional bombing halt as part of a total program to end the fighting and bring stability to the area.

Parallel proposals, differing somewhat in emphasis and detail, have been forwarded by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and George S. McGovern, D-S.D.

On the other side of the issue in Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., who said he favors "turning the Vietnam matter over to the military and giving it a free hand."

Open House

At Fire Station

The Sikeston fire department will have open house from 9 a.m. until 10 p.m. daily this week at fire station one, 405 West Malone.

This is Fire Prevention Week. School children will tour the fire station throughout the week. Each day at 6 p.m. a house will be burned for demonstration purposes and drill in the 300 block of Chesapeake Street. Fire Chief L. D. M. Ramsey said.

Free coffee, doughnuts and Cokes will be served at the fire station.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

The deprived need help and they need it from the folks at home as never before.

The federal government has taken such a commanding role in assisting the poor and in exploiting this position for political reasons that casual observers might assume there was nothing more to do.

Nothing is farther from the truth.

The federal government's handouts have created almost as many problems as they have solved. They have financed sexual promiscuity, glued people to welfare, wasted millions of dollars, created shotgun programs into which criminal and subversive elements have infiltrated along with some sound procedures and constructive action.

There never was a time when there was a greater need for charity at home.

This may astonish many taxpayers, who have been led to believe that their massive contributions to federal government programs are sufficient. They aren't.

The deprived need not only the sympathy of all Americans but their help both in time and dollars.

The United Fund and other privately supported campaigns, which seek to build a better America, without federal aid, never were needed more.

Private enterprise can make valuable contributions toward helping the poor by training them in skills in which they can become self sustaining. They can do this alone or with federal government assistance.

The poor are everybody's business and always will be.

They should not be the people, who are remembered only during presidential election campaigns or at other times when they are exploited for vote getting purposes.

If the people don't care about their own neighbors and friends the federal government will continue to make the effort to fill the void.

The federal government will continue in a large way to fail to solve the problems of the poor.

Big as it is it isn't quite big enough, wealthy enough or able enough to accomplish the task alone.

Nothing is easier to avoid than publicity. If one sincerely doesn't want it, one doesn't get it.

Well Art we say, we didn't think you would say anything about the poker club.

IN A FIRE . . . SECONDS COUNT!

When fire breaks out at home - when every second counts - it's too late to start making plans to get everyone out safely.

The time for serious planning for quick, safe evacuation in case of a home fire is right now - when you have seconds and minutes to spare - before fire strikes.

This step-by-step approach to working out home fire escape procedures is suggested by the National Fire Protection Association:

1. Carefully figure out at least two routes to the outside from every room in the house, especially bedrooms. Allow for blocking of stairways and halls by fire.

2. Since many home fires break out after the family is asleep, make it a rule to close bedroom doors at night. These closed doors will hold back flame and smoke, allowing vital extra time for escape.

3. For escape from upper floors, plan to use porch and garage roofs, ladders, or trees as ways down to safety. Be sure exit windows work easily - so that even a child can open them - and see that windows are low and large enough to climb through.

4. Pick an outside assembly point, well away from the house, where everyone in the family will meet. Emphasize the rule "Once out, Stay out!"

5. Make sure everyone knows how to summon the fire department, from a street alarm box or a neighbor's telephone. First get everyone out of the house, then call the fire department.

FREE PRESS MEANS MUCH

Newspaper Week! October 8 to 14. Probably the most impressive way for the public to learn what newspapers mean in their daily lives would be to have no papers printed during Newspaper Week -- but that is not practical.

The hometown paper is the living record of what happens in the thousands of communities across the land -- marriages, births, deaths, social activity, politics, school news, legal notices, advertised products to inform customers, world news, everything that enables the U. S. citizen to be familiar with the latest devices and products by which he enjoys the highest living and information standards in the world.

But over and above these material blessings, a free press, which is the background of free speech, is the average man's guarantee of personal liberty, religious freedom and protection against political and judicial persecution. Dictators are afraid of a free press, hence they have a controlled press. The people read only what their rulers wish them to read. Try imagining if you can, what it would be like to live in a country where an editor dared not print a letter criticizing the political party in power, and where an editor feared to express an adverse opinion. Think of what a free press really means to you -- life, freedom from political oppression, liberty and the pursuit of happiness under our Constitution.

Render therefore unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's

TELL ME HOW LONG THE TRAIN'S BEEN GONE

What doesn't happen is news sometimes. For now, the news is that the Eastern littoral's fast train has what Abraham Lincoln used to call the slows. "The Claiborne Pell Special," as it is called on Capitol Hill, is standing in the station. Sen. Pell (D.R.I.) sponsored the initial legislation.

"Speed in Locomotion should be a function of human purpose," Lewis Mumford observed in The City in History. Speed in locomotion between Washington and New York -- and eventually among other major cities -- is coming, but a good bit more slowly than had been planned. Our highways are bumper to bumper. Planes are stacked up high above our big airports -- often in holding patterns hundreds of miles away. At the same time, U. S. railroads dropped 68 passenger trains last year, and the train continues.

Against this background the high-speed railroad service between Washington and New York and New York and Washington is long overdue. The service, which was to have begun last October, originally was postponed until early 1968. Now a dime will get you a nickel that the trains won't be on the tracks by October 1969. New York magazine reports: "Originally scheduled to be completed last fall (the train is) now almost one year late and shows excellent possibilities of being two years late."

Allan S. Boyd, U.S. Secretary of Transportation, told a railroad industry group on Oct. 10, 1967 that Northeast Corridor train service would be "comparable in most ways with the Tokkaido in Japan, except in name and cost." Cost may just possibly be part of the answer to the delay in this country. Japan put out $1.3 billion for the 150-mile-an-hour trains which speed between Osaka and Tokyo. Our government is spending $11.7 million for fiscal 1968 for the whole Boston-New York-Washington program, with other outlays coming to $59 million. Industry sources indicate that the cost of new tracks for the Washington-Boston run could come to $5 billion.

Oddly enough, the experiment involves two trains. One is a Turbo-Train for New York-Boston, built by United Aircraft. Streamlined and sleek, it is described as a "plane without wings."

For the New York-Washington go, the train is the Penn Central Metroliner, being processed by the Budd Company. Part of the trouble is that Budd divided the order between Westinghouse and General Electric. Each car has 10 miles or so of wiring, and the G. E. and Westinghouse cars don't necessarily jibe. Some of the other gremlin problems are close to ludicrous. On the original Turbo-Train the door to the john couldn't be opened when the toilet seat was down.

When President Johnson signed the High Speed Transportation Research and Development Act into law on Sept. 30, 1965, he said that thenation had achieved flight faster than sound and had sent television cameras into space to orbit Mars, but still had "the same tired and inadequate mass transportation system between our towns and cities that we had 30 years ago." Industry and government transportation experts are generally agreed that rapid ground travel is the most poorly developed part of the national transportation system.

The first fast trains may run between Boston and New York this month. But no one can really say for sure when the Sen. Pell Special will go the whole route.

Bill Corrigan says failure is one of the things that is spoiled by success.

The Colonel said: It is a pretty sign that the man is the boss if he sits around home in the evening with his shoes and shocks off. A woman likes everything neat in her house. Regardless of how much a man's feet are scrubbed, rinsed in hot water and powdered, they would not look neat even if a baby blue ribbon were tied in a bow around each toe.

Old maids have no babies to keep them awake, so they usually get cats to put out and let in.

The right kind of person is always glad to get home, after being away on a visit.

Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP) -- He's the guy nobody knocks because nobody wants to. He's what is known on Broadway as "a class guy."

All his life he has looked like he was having a good time, and Fred Astaire still does now as he nears 70.

It has been more than half a century since the slender, boy from Omaha and his sister Adele danced to stardom here in "Over the Top," away back in 1917 when America was Tweaking the Kaiser's mustache. But he still has that same nostalgic blitheness of spirit and rhythm that made him a symbol of the carefree 1920s.

It's on view again in a film version of "Finian's Rainbow," Fred's first musical in eight years.

Astaire is quietly amused at the public image of graceful insouciance he has built up over the years.

"I have the idea," he remarked, "that people regard me affectionately, I hope as someone who danced from here to there through life rather like an idiot. But it wasn't that way at all."

"The success I've had came from knowing where I was going--looking like I knew where I was going. Like the Boy Scouts, I've always believed in being prepared."

Behind the seemingly effortless nonchalance of his dance steps lie endless hours of practice. If there is dialogue, "I learn my lines until I could give them standing on my head in a tree."

Having starred in every medium from vaudeville to television, Fred has no particular professional goals left to conquer.

"I only want to do now what is worth doing," he said. "I don't have to go for the money, and I am hard to get because I don't want to do anything that will wear out a welcome that has been there for so many years. I don't want to disappoint anybody, particularly myself."

Astaire, who lives alone in his Beverly Hills home and keeps three racehorses as a profitable hobby, is a man at peace with his soul.

"This may sound icky to some," he said, "But I think life is wonderful. I've largely escaped illness and tragedy except for the death of my wife nearly 15 years ago. That has been hard to accept, but I've learned to live with it. But it still bothers me that so many interesting things have happened I know she would have liked to have seen."

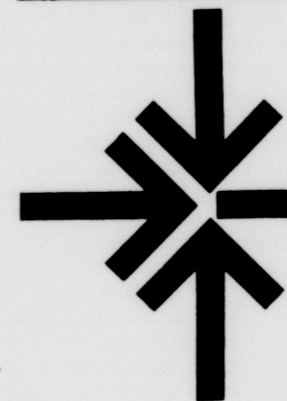

"But I have two grandchildren I enjoy, and if you have a sense of humor, you can always find something to laugh at."

He has a simple philosophy: "I never know why I do things--except that if I want to, I do. I would rather like to win the Kentucky Derby but if I don't," he gave an elfish grin--"there are other races that are fun to win."

Here are Fred's likes: "Brown suede shoes and blue, yellow and pink shirts--baseball, if they'd just get rid of the intentional walk--blues songs--good solid rock music--mod clothing--miniskirts--playing golf and billiards--French cooking, although I'm a light eater--bourbon old-fashioned--warm weather--and doing things by myself."

And here are his dislikes: "Being asked to dance at a party--the sound of fire engines or ambulances--staying up late--thin neckties--foods cooked in rich sauces--cigarette butts, since I've quit smoking--false or exaggerated reports in the newspapers--gushing flattery, because it's embarrassing--talking about myself."

Washington - Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON SAY: Ethics committee probes Rep. Wilson's ghost voting; his denials clash with tally clerk's story; irate ladies plan warm welcome for returning legislators

WASHINGTON - When this column reported that Rep. Bob Wilson, R-Calif., had been recorded as voting on the house floor on days he was actually campaigning in California, he fumed that we were "liars."

The house ethics committee was sufficiently impressed with the charge, however, that it was ordered an investigation to find out who is really lying.

It might also be worth the committee's time to check into Wilson's using as his own private automobile a new Ford leased by the Republican congressional campaign committee.

The leasing arrangement may violate the limited code of ethics adopted by the house last April.

The staff director, I. Lee Potter, refused to divulge how much the committee pays for Wilson to drive around in a new Ford, except that it was a better deal than the other auto companies offered. Potter also stressed that the car is made available to Wilson as committee chairman.

Meanwhile, the congressman from California has put out statements implying that his ghost voting was merely a routine clerical error which happens frequently. Actually, each congressional office is supposed to check the congressional record every morning for any errors involving the individual congressmen.

Then the errors are supposed to be corrected the following day. In Wilson's case, he was recorded as voting on September 9, 10 and 16 when he was really far away in California. Yet he didn't request a correction until the Republican whip, Illinois Rep. Les Arends, called him back to Washington and told him to set the congressional record straight.

House Clerk Pat Jennings has also reported in a confidential memo to speaker John McCormack that Democratic tally clerk Thomas Cooke "had marked congressman Wilson present and voting in order to help out at the request of Walter Kennedy."

Kennedy happens to be the GOP pair clerk, who tries to line up live "pairs" for absent Republicans. He sometimes asks a congressman on the other side to abstain from voting to balance out the absent congressman's failure to vote.

Kennedy has denied, however, that he had anything to do with Wilson's ghost voting.

At first, Cooke tried to keep Kennedy's name out of the investigation. But Jennings called Cooke back on the carpet and lectured him: "Now listen, I want the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. The whole concept of Democratic government is at stake here."

Cooke finally blurted: "Walter Kennedy asked me to record congressman Wilson and being here and voting on those days."

"Will Kennedy back that up?" asked Jennings.

"No, he probably won't," said Cooke.

Two witnesses, legislative aide Ben Gthrie and legal adviser Bill Hollowell, heard Cooke's statement. Now it is up to the house ethics committee to separate the facts from the falsehoods.

LADY REFORMERS--Congressional reforms, intended to update the archaic procedures of congress, are once again headed for the ash heap in the house.

When the congressmen come home to ask the voters to elect them, however, they will have to answer to a lot of irate ladies. "Womanpower-in-action," a coalition of women's organizations brought together by McCall's magazine, has resolved to spend the remaining month of the election campaign crusading for congressional reforms.

The ladies are disturbed over the account of misfeasance, malfeasance and nonfeasance in our book, "The Case Against Congress," and they intend to do something about it. A special allied women's organizations to form task forces to agitate for reforms. Here are some of the specific actions the ladies lay out:

1. In each congressional district they will ask their returning congressman whether he signed the discharge petition to bring the stalled reforms upon the house floor for a vote. All candidates also be asked how they will vote next year on congressional ethics reforms.

2. The women will call upon all senate-house candidates to make public their financial holdings, sources of income and law clients. Since a shocking number of congressmen have been voting for their pocketbook interests, the ladies would like to know exactly what those interests are, so a comparison can be made with each congressman's voting record.

3. In statements and letters to their local newspapers, the women will demand not only that congressional reforms be adopted, but that the loopholes in the congressional ethics codes be plugged up.

The reforms would eliminate needless closed-door, congressional secrets, enabled committee members to act on legislation stalled by a ruthless chairman, tighten lobbying regulations, provide for adequate committee staffs for the minority party, and generally bring congress into the 20th century.

For three years these reforms have been blocked by patriarchal speaker John McCormack in behalf of the all-powerful committee chairmen who don't want their powers abridged.

Although the senate accepted the reform bill by a decisive 75-to-9 vote and it would easily pass the house if it could be brought to a vote, McCormack contends that it is too "controversial" and the house has "no time" for it.

Actually, the house has had plenty of time to act. One a number of days during the past two weeks the house did virtually nothing except call the

AN INDIVIDUAL'S "WAR ON POVERTY"

Government bureaucrats tell us that only they can "help the poor." But a young doctor from Los Gatos, California, is providing that the best help for the poor is freely given on an individual, person-to-person basis.

Dr. High Schade, his wife and two sons saw the need for medical help for the poor people living in the East San Jose area. He bought a small house in the neighborhood, and the Schade family cleaned it, painted it, and returned it into a medical clinic.

He opened the clinic on July 1 of this year, with no publicity. But within a few weeks, the news spread throughout the community that the clinic was available to all those in need of care, regardless of race, color, or creed.

Dr. Schade has accomplished this without any government aid. His work is wholly on an individual basis. Congressman Charles Gubser, who represents the San Jose area, has said of Dr. Schade:

"Speaking as one citizen, I intensely admire Dr. Schade and what he has done. Instead of waiting for high-sounding slogans and expensive appropriations which flounder around in bureaucracy and political infighting, Dr. Schade of Los Gatos, his wife and young family have done something about a specific problem."

"Let us hope that his example will encourage other talented, successful people to personally involve themselves in a 'people-to-people' war on poverty."

Government programs to "help the poor" usually achieve the opposite, at great expense to the productive citizens of this country. The real solution to poverty will come from personal enterprise and individual help.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

The deprived need help and they need it from the folks at home as never before.

The federal government has taken such a commanding role in assisting the poor and in exploiting this position for political reasons that casual observers might assume there was nothing more to do.

Nothing is farther from the truth.
The federal government's handouts have created almost as many problems as they have solved. They have financed sexual promiscuity, glued people to welfare, wasted millions of dollars, created shotgun programs into which criminal and subversive elements have infiltrated along with some sound procedures and constructive action.

There never was a time when there was a greater need for charity at home.

This may astonish many taxpayers, who have been led to believe that their massive contributions to federal government programs are sufficient. They aren't.

The deprived need not only the sympathy of all Americans but their help both in time and dollars.

The United Fund and other privately supported campaigns, which seek to build a better America, without federal aid, never were needed more.

Private enterprise can make valuable contributions toward helping the poor by training them in skills in which they can become self sustaining. They can do this alone or with federal government assistance.

The poor are everybody's business and always will be.

They should not be the people, who are remembered only during presidential election campaigns or at other times when they are exploited for vote getting purposes.

If the people don't care about their own neighbors and friends the federal government will continue to make the effort to fill the void.

The federal government will continue in a large way to fail to solve the problems of the poor.

Big as it is it isn't quite big enough, wealthy enough or able enough to accomplish the task alone.

Nothing is easier to avoid than publicity. If one sincerely doesn't want it, one doesn't get it.

Well Art we say, we didn't think you would say anything about the poker club.

IN A FIRE . . . SECONDS COUNT!

When fire breaks out at home - when every second counts - it's too late to start making plans to get everyone out safely.

The time for serious planning for quick, safe evacuation in case of a home fire is right now - when you have seconds and minutes to spare - before fire strikes.

This step-by-step approach to working out home fire escape procedures is suggested by the National Fire Protection Association:

1. Carefully figure out at least two routes to the outside from every room in the house, especially bedrooms. Allow for blocking of stairways and halls by fire.

2. Since many home fires break out after the family is asleep, make it a rule to close bedroom doors at night. These closed doors will hold back flame and smoke, allowing vital extra time for escape.

3. For escape from upper floors, plan to use porch and garage roofs, ladders, or trees as ways down to safety. Be sure exit windows work easily - so that even a child can open them - and see that windows are low and large enough to climb through.

4. Pick an outside assembly point, well away from the house, where everyone in the family will meet. Emphasize the rule "Once out, Stay out!"

5. Make sure everyone knows how to summon the fire department, from a street alarm box or a neighbor's telephone. First get everyone out of the house, then call the fire department.

FREE PRESS MEANS MUCH

Newspaper Week! October 8 to 14. Probably the most impressive way for the public to learn what newspapers mean in their daily lives would be to have no papers printed during Newspaper Week -- but that is not practical.

The hometown paper is the living record of what happens in the thousands of communities across the land - marriages, births, deaths, social activity, politics, school news, legal notices, advertised products to inform customers, world news, everything that enables the U. S. citizen to be familiar with the latest devices and products by which he enjoys the highest living and information standards in the world.

But over and above these material blessings, a free press, which is the background of free speech, is the average man's guarantee of personal liberty, religious freedom and protection against political and judicial persecution. Dictators are afraid of a free press, hence they have a controlled press. The people read only what their rulers wish them to read. Try imagining if you can, what it would be like to live in a country where an editor dared not print a letter criticizing the political party in power, and where an editor feared to express an adverse opinion. Think of what a free press really means to you - life, freedom from political oppression, liberty and the pursuit of happiness under our Constitution.

Render thereforeunto Caesar the things that are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's

TELL ME HOW LONG THE TRAIN'S BEEN GONE

What doesn't happen is news sometimes. For now, the news is that the Eastern littoral's fast train has what Abraham Lincoln used to call the slows, "The Claiborne Pell Special," as it is called on Capitol Hill, is standing in the station. Sen. Pell (D-R.I.) sponsored the initial legislation.

"Speed in Locomotion should be a function of human purpose," Lewis Mumford observed in The City in History. Speed in locomotion between Washington and New York -- and eventually among other major cities -- is coming, but a good bit more slowly than had been planned. Our highways are bumper to bumper. Planes are stacked up high above our big airports -- often in holding patterns hundreds of miles away. At the same time, U. S. railroads dropped 68 passenger trains last year, and the drain continues.

Against this background the high-speed railroad service between Washington and New York and New York and Washington is long overdue. The service, which was to have begun last October, originally was postponed until early 1968. Now a dime will get you a nickel that the trains won't be on the tracks by October 1969. New York magazine reports: "Originally scheduled to be completed last fall (the train is) now almost one year late and shows excellent possibilities of being two years late."

Allan S. Boyd, U.S. Secretary of Transportation, told a railroad industry group on Oct. 10, 1967 that Northeast Corridor train service would be "comparable in most ways with the Tokkaido in Japan, except in name and cost." Cost may just possibly be part of the answer to the delay in this country. Japan put out $1.3 billion for the 150-mile-an-hour trains which speed between Osaka and Tokyo. Our government is spending $11.7 million for fiscal 1968 for the whole Boston-New York-Washington program, with other outlays coming to $59 million. Industry sources indicate that the cost of new tracks for the Washington-Boston run could come to $5 billion.

Oddly enough, the experiment involves two trains. One is a Turbo-Train for New York-Boston, built by United Aircraft. Streamlined and sleek, it is described as a "plane without wings."

For the New York-Washington go, the train is the Penn Central Metroliner, being processed by the Budd Company. Part of the trouble is that Budd divided the order between Westinghouse and General Electric. Each car has 10 miles or so of wiring, and the G. E. and Westinghouse cars don't necessarily jibe. Some of the other gremlin problems are close to ludicrous. On the original Turbo-Train the door to the john couldn't be opened when the toilet seat was down.

When President Johnson signed the High Speed Transportation Research and Development Act into law on Sept. 30, 1965, he said that thenation had achieved flight faster than sound and had sent television cameras into space to orbit Mars, but still had "the same tired and inadequate mass transportation system between our towns and cities that we had 30 years ago." Industry and government transportation experts are generally agreed that rapid ground travel is the most poorly developed part of the national transportation system.

The first fast trains may run between Boston and New York this month. But no one can really say for sure when the Sen. Pell Special will go the whole route.

Bill Corrigan says failure is one of the things that is spoiled by success.

The Colonel said: It is a pretty sign that the man is the boss if he sits around home in the evening with his shoes and shocks off. A woman likes everything neat in her house. Regardless of how much a man's feet are scrubbed, rinsed in hot water and powdered, they would not look neat even if a baby blue ribbon were tied in a bow around each toe.

Old maids have no babies to keep them awake, so they usually get cats to put out and let in.

The right kind of person is always glad to get home, after being away on a visit.

NEW YORK (AP) — He's the guy nobody knocks because nobody wants to. He's what is known on Broadway as "a class guy."

All his life he has looked like he was having a good time, and Fred Astaire still does now as he nears 70.

It has been more than half a century since the slender boy from Omaha and his sister Adele danced to stardom here in "Over the Top," away back in 1917 when America was Tweaking the Kaiser's mustache. But he still has that same nostalgic blitheness of spirit and rhythm that made him a symbol of the carefree 1920s.

It's on view again in a film version of "Finian's Rainbow," Fred's first musical in eight years.

Astaire is quietly amused at the public image of graceful insouciance he has built up over the years.

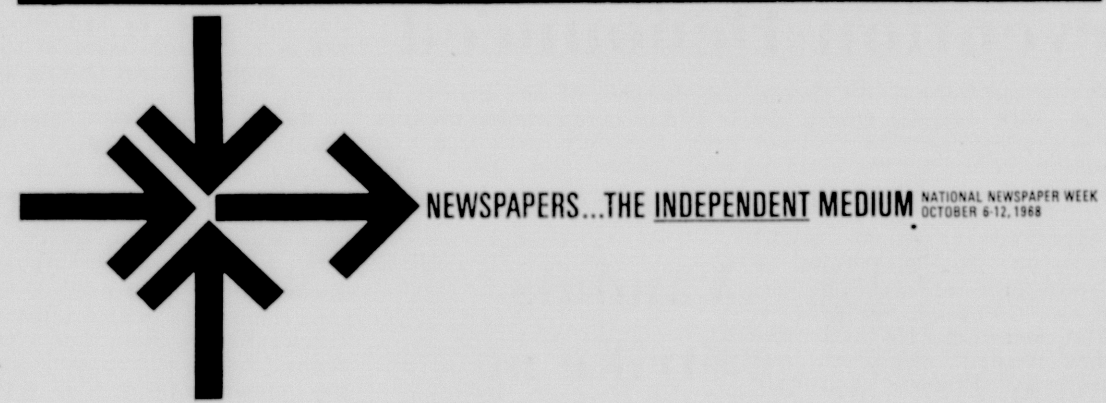

"I have the idea," he remarked, "that people regard me affectionately. I hope someone who danced from here to there through life rather like an idiot. But it wasn't that way at all."

"The success I've had came from knowing where I was going-looking like I knew where I was going. Like the Boy Scouts, I've always believed in being prepared."

Behind the seemingly effortless nonchalance of his dance steps lie endless hours of practice. If there is dialogue, "I learn my lines until I could give them standing on my head in a tree."

Having starred in every medium from vaudeville to television, Fred has no particular professional goals left to conquer.

"I only want to do now what is worth doing," he said. "I don't have to go for the money, and I am hard to get because I

DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON SAY: Ethics committee probes Rep. Wilson's ghost voting; his denials clash with tally clerk's story; irate ladies plan warm welcome for returning legislators

WASHINGTON - When this column reported that Rep. Bob Wilson, R-Calif., had been recorded as voting on the house floor on days he was actually campaigning in California, he fumed that we were "liars."

The house ethics committee was sufficiently impressed with the charge, however, that it was ordered an investigation to find out who is really lying.

It might also be worth the committee's time to check into Wilson's using as his own private automobile, a new ford leased by the Republican congressional campaign committee.

The staff director, I. Lee Potter, refused to divulge how much the committee pays Wilson to drive around in a new ford, except that it was a better deal than the other auto companies offered. Potter also stressed that the car is made available to Wilson as committee chairman.

Meanwhile, the congressman from California has put out statements implying that his ghost voting was merely a routine clerical error which happens frequently. Actually, each congressional office is supposed to check the congressional record every morning for any errors involving the individual congressman.

In Wilson's case, he was recorded as voting on September 9, 10 and 16 when he was really far away in California. Yet he didn't request a correction until the Republican whip, Illinois Rep. Les Arends, called him back to Washington and told him to set the congressional record straight.

House Clerk Pat Jennings has also reported in a confidential memo to speaker John McCormack that Democratic tally clerk Thomas Cooke "had marked congressman Wilson present and voting in order to help out at the request of Walter Kennedy."

Kennedy happens to be the GOP pair clerk, who tries to line up live "pairs" for absent Republicans. He sometimes asks a congressman on the other side to abstain from voting to balance out the absent congressman's failure to vote.

A man's life is related to his career-school years, working years, retirement years, rather than his body. After adolescence, he simply gets gently older.

By comparison, a woman is in pawn to her glands and hormones, stirred by monthly cycles that occur within a life cycle that is often ill-understood, a life cycle that proceeds by fits and starts and that consists of five clearly defined "ages":

Childhood, the most unself-conscious of times for a girl, when boys are primarily companions. (Nevertheless, a little girl's body contains fully 500,000 immature egg follicles, a portent of her future);

Adolescence, when the little girl slowly, nervously turns into a young woman capable of girls bearing children;

Maturity, when the young woman faces the challenges of independence, love, marriage, motherhood;

Menopause, the reverse of adolescence, when slowly, nervously, the mature woman returns to an independent life without growing children and, simultaneously, she loses the capacity to bear babies;

Postmenopause, when a woman looks forward to a 30-year "age" of glacial stability, when she is free to choose for herself what her activities and responsibilities will be.

Many of these stages used to be wrapped in superstition and frightening myths. Old wives' tales persist but, as the frontiers of knowledge have expanded, the foolishness of these stories has become obvious. Nor need women be in thrall any longer to forces totally beyond control. Synthetic hormones can often correct nature's mistakes, relieve needless annoyances, abolish fear.

A woman's life can be a wondrous affair.

CHILDHOOD

Girl Babies are Built to last

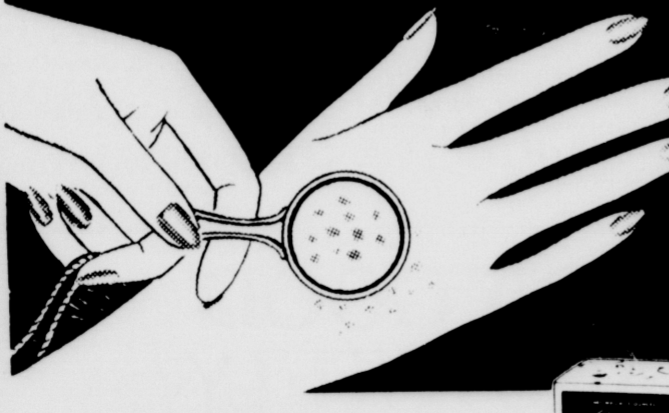

From the moment of conception, girls are built to last. At conception, boys outnumber girls 130 to 100. From then on, those male embryos and fetuses give up the ghost in disproportionate numbers. So many more boys spontaneously abort that, at birth, there are only 106 boys for every 100 new-born girls. In the first few months of life, the boys continue to succumb. When that first birthday cake comes

At about that age, enough adrenal estrogen is released to give a little girl a subtle feminine look. At around eight, her knees and shoulders are visibly plumper than a boy's. By 10, most boys are clearly stronger than girls of the same age, showing 35 percent more muscle strength on specific tests. Small wonder that girls learn early to prudently limit their expressions of anger to tears and screams, rather than attempting hand-to-hand combat.

Bred to Please

The really crucial determinant of childhood sex differences, of course, may well be the social norm decreeing that girls should be agreeable and ingratiating, while boys should be independent and aggressive. Little girls tend to pattern themselves after their mothers, as boys do after their fathers.

THOSE HORRID AGE SPOTS*

FADE THEM OUT

*Weathered brown spots on the surface of your hands and face tell the world you're getting old—perhaps before you really are. Fade them away with new ESOTERICA, that medicated cream that breaks up masses of pigment on the skin, makes hands look white and young again. Equally effective on the face, neck and arms. Not a cover-up. Acts in the skin—not on it. Fragrant, greaseless base for softening, lubricating skin as it clears up those blemishes. At leading drug and toiletry counters and beauty shops. If you have these age-revealing brown spots, blotches, or if you want clearer, lighter skin, begin using ESOTERICA today.

ESOTERICA SOAP softens skin, helps clear surface blemishes. Combats dryness.

25th Wedding Anniversary The Five Ages Of Woman

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne D. Reeves, 220 Crow, celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary Sept. 25, at their home with a supper prepared by their children.

Those attending were Mr. and Mrs. Gary Kindred and son, Mrs. Janie Ellsworth and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. John Reeves, and Mr. and Mrs. Dewanye Reeves and daughters. The children living at home who attended were Janet, Margaret, Linda and John Paul Reeves.

Friends and family dropped in for coffee and cake.

INTRODUCTION

A man's life is related to his career-school years, working years, retirement years—rather than his body. After adolescence, he simply gets gently older.

By comparison, a woman is in pawn to her glands and hormones, stirred by monthly cycles that occur within a life cycle that is often ill-understood—a life cycle that proceeds by fits and starts and that consists of five clearly defined "ages."

Childhood, the most unself-conscious of times for a girl, when boys are primarily companions. (Nevertheless, a little girl's body contains fully 500,000 immature egg follicles, a portent of her future!)

Adolescence, when the little girl slowly, nervously turns into a young woman capable of bearing children.

Maturity, when the young woman faces the challenges of independence, love, marriage, motherhood.

Menopause, the reverse of adolescence, when slowly, nervously, the mature woman returns to an independent life without growing children and, simultaneously, she loses the capacity to bear babies.

Postmenopause, when a woman looks forward to a 30-year "age" of glacial stability, when she is free to choose for herself what her activities and responsibilities will be.

Mrs. Keith Collins explained the Child Day Care Center program and volunteers were signed to work.

Mrs. M. L. Canedy announced plans for the bazaar to be held Nov. 26 in the American Legion hall.

CHILDHOOD

Studies show that teachers often unfairly favor girls over schoolboys because the girls are so much quieter and more obedient. Treated more gently, they tend to be gentler.

A study in an orphan asylum underscores this. When the nicknames boys and girls gave each other were analyzed, it turned out that nearly 40 percent of the boys' nicknames were derogatory compared to only seven percent of the nicknames thought up by the girls. Faced with a plump little girl, the boys frequently opted for a nickname like "Fatso", while the more generous girls would come up with something like "Blondie."

Curiosity about the world and people consumes both boys and girls. "What makes a cloud?" "Where do I come from?" These are every-day, interchangeable questions from children. Pediatricians believe both should be answered, not necessarily in great detail. If a child wants to know more, she will ask further questions. Honest answers are always the best policy. What pediatricians caution against are over-answers, answers going far beyond the girl's request for information.

Information Please

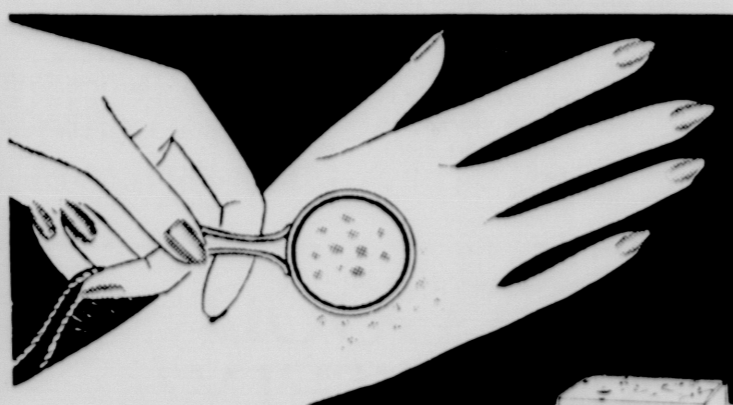

There is a growing recognition of the need for down-to-earth factual information on sexual matters for youngsters. Many schools have begun sex education courses. In the lower grades, appropriate subjects are: how the sexes differ, how a baby is conceived, and how it is born.

False modesty instilled in a girl's early years can become an adult hang-up. Nakedness is essentially normal. So is masturbation and "playing doctor." Physicians agree that a girl should never be scolded for such behavior. However, says pediatrician Herbert Birch of the Albert Einstein College of Medicine, a decent regard for social convention is not necessarily prudery; even a three- or four-year-old, he feels, is old enough to be told that she should not handle herself in public. Generally, genital play is usually dropped at around seven or eight years of age.

Dr. Elizabeth Parker, a Los Angeles gynecologist, points out that parents lay the groundwork for sex education "by loving the child and expressing that love in a meaningful way" and by the way they treat one another. As in more routine matters, "Don't do what I do but do what I say" does not work here either.

The beloved daughter of loving parents is guaranteed to be made of "sugar and spice and all that's nice."

Cards Take 3-1 Edge

DETROIT (AP) — Now that Bob Gibson has made another farce of his celebrated World Series confrontation with Denny McLain, the pitchers may call a cease fire and join the same team.

Gibson, who overwhelmed McLain and the rest of the Detroit Tigers with a five-hit, 17-strikeout performance in the Series opener, threw another five-hitter as St. Louis battered McLain and five other pitchers 10-1 Sunday.

That gave the Cardinals 3-1 edge in the series and left it up to Mickey Lolich, the only successful Tiger hurler, to keep the season alive in his duel with Nelson Briles today. Lolich beat Briles in the second game last Thursday.

Before gaining his seventh straight complete game Series victory, Gibson had to work and wait through four hours and 25 minutes of rain, mist and cold. That was a lot longer than McLain was around—the 31-game winner removed himself from the game during the 74th minute, third-inning rain delay—but when the game finally had ended, the pitchers found themselves making similar post-Series plans.

The plans revolve around Vice President Hubert Humphrey, the Democratic presidential candidate who visited both clubhouses after sitting through the long afternoon.

"I'm going to back that man," McLain said, adding he would join Humphrey's campaign tour for two or three days after the Series.

"I'll probably get into Washington after the season, and I imagine we'll probably get together," Gibson said following an invitation from Humphrey to meet with him. "I'm a Democrat, but I'm not a politician. I'm a pitcher."

And McLain was the first to second that statement.

"He's a great, great competitor, one of the greatest I've ever seen," the 24-year-old Tiger said.

McLain disclosed he asked to be taken out of the game because his right shoulder was bothering him. But he refused to use that as an alibi for a performance in which he was rocked for four runs and six hits in 2-3 innings.

At the same time, McLain said he doesn't think his two Series losses hurt any of the luster off his 31-victory season, the first in the majors in 37 years.

"I don't think it's embarrassing to get knocked about in a World Series," he said.

"There are guys who have lost two games before. Sandy Koufax lost two a few years ago and Whitey Ford lost two before that."

"And it can't hurt me one dime financially either. I'm booked solidly all winter long. There's nothing that can hurt that. I guess my pride is the biggest thing that's hurt."

His pride started taking a bigger dip on the second pitch of Sunday's game, when Lou Brock smashed a 415-foot home run after his leadoff appearance had been delayed by rain for 37 minutes.

By the time the rain was falling heavily enough for time to be called in the third inning—the Cardinals had rapped McLain for five more hits and three more runs.

When play resumed 74 minutes later, McLain no longer was the Detroit pitcher.

"I told Mayo I just couldn't continue and asked him to take me out," McLain explained, staring at the ground. "My shoulder has been bothering me since the Baltimore series last month, and it was real sore today."

"I didn't want to hurt my arm anymore because I have other seasons to think of."

The Tigers had the game to think of, and they did their best to delay it long enough for the rain to become unbearable.

In the top of the fourth inning, first baseman Norm Cash went to the mound to talk to relief pitcher Daryl Patterson. In the bottom of the inning, Willie Horton went to the dugout to clean his spikes and his bat and Jim Northrup exchanged his broken bat.

The Cardinals countered in the fifth inning when Julian Javier, on base with a two-out single, tried to steal second and was out easily.

Cardinal Manager Red Schoendienst insisted Javier had the steal sign and just left first too soon. But that move, and the others, induced the umpires to call Schoendienst and Tiger boss Mayo Smith to the plate for a conference.

"We didn't want one team to be hurrying and we didn't want one team to be stalling," plate umpire Bill Kinnamon said.

Kinnamon didn't say anything about Gibson speeding up so that's what the 32-year-old right-hander did.

After allowing a hit in each of the first four innings, Gibson struck out Jim Price and Dick McAuliffe and retired Mickey Stanley on a fly to center. That made the game official.

The Cardinals, meanwhile, amassed 13 hits, including a home run by Gibson in the fourth and three hits by Brock—a homer, a triple and a three-run double in the eighth.

Gibson's blow made him the only pitcher ever to hit two homers in Series play, and Brock stole third after his double, giving him a record-tying seventh steal in this Series and a record-tying 14th for all of his Series play.

The first mark he tied was his own; the second belonged to Eddie Collins.

What Gibson and Brock and the rest of the Cardinals did was leave the Tigers with the almost impossible task of coming back from a 3-1 deficit.

The way things look now Gibson might not have to go through a third battle with McLain. In fact there's one question as to whether McLain would pitch again in the Series if it went to the seventh game.

PLENTY OF POWER is stored in the right arm of St. Louis Cards' pitcher Bob Gibson - and under the hood of his Outstanding Player Award for the '67 World Series. Gibson won the new Corvette automobile for his three-victory performance in the Series. He seems headed for another banner series, after beat 31-game winner Denny McLain of the Detroit Tigers for the second time in the series Sunday, 10-1.

Bradley Takes Southeast;

Jewell, Culver-Stockton Win

Graceland has taken an early lead in the Missouri College Athletic Union football race, while Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association teams have another week of warmups before plunging into conference play. Graceland edged Central Methodist, 63, Saturday in the MCAU's season opener. In nonconference action, the other MCAU teams had a 3-1 record, with William Jewell blanking Colorado College 16-0; Missouri Valley nipping Huron, S.D., College 21-20; Culver-Stockton belting St. Procopius of Illinois 52-6; and Tarkio losing to Lea College of Minnesota 7-0.

This week, Graceland plays at William Jewell, Culver-Stockton at Central Methodist and Missouri Valley at Tarkio in a full slate of MCAU games.

It was mostly a lost weekend for MIAA teams, who lost five of six games. Only Central Missouri upheld the conference's pride, tromping Illinois State at Normal 20. On the losing end for the MIAA were Northeast Missouri, which bowed to Lincoln University 20-6; Southeast Missouri, a 22-19 victim of Bradley; Northwest Missouri, which succumbed to Fort Hays, Kan., 14-3; Rolla, which lost to Hillsdale, Mich., 24-16; and Southwest Missouri, which bowed to Pittsburg, Kan., 27-10.

This week's nonconference scheduled for MIAA teams has Harding College of Arkansas at Central Missouri, Murray State of Kentucky at Southeast Missouri, Illinois-Chicago Circle at Southwest Missouri, Lincoln U. at Northwest Missouri and Rolla at Wisconsin-Milwaukee. Arkansas State defeated Missouri Southern 29-13, while Washington U. of St. Louis bowed to Southwestern Tennessee 14-10, in other Missouri college action.

Matthews' Pirates qualified for the class M state tournament by winning the Illinois - Scott City regional where they had been seeded second behind Oran. Their march to the title included victories over St. Pius of Festus 89-58, and Dexter 1 51-38 in first and second round games at Cape Girardeau. They advanced to the finals by defeating Hermann 58-47 in semifinal action at Columbia.

The Pirates then won the class M crown by downing Boonville 70-61.

Matthews Pirates, defending state high school class M basketball champions... will not make it in 1969!

That's not a prediction. It's only our way of going about telling you that the Pirates, under Coach Jim Hart have dropped into the class S statute and will shoot for back to back titles in different classes.

Coach Hart has two starters returning after his 1968 team that stormed through the state tournament at Columbia, ending the season 35-1 and the coveted "M" Championship, their lone loss to Oran in mid-season and a loss they made up when they dismantled the Eagles in the Little State tournament at Illinois - Scott City for the championship and the right to move into the state class M Tournament bracket.

The losses off last year's team include two all state guards, Leonard Bishop and Armon Ring; an all-district and all-class forward in Ernest Hardin and the best sixth man in the district, James Rowe, the spark plug of the state tournament for the Pirates.

Rowe was a late season replacement for Kara Nunn, one of the returnees, who injured himself in the state semifinals at Cape Girardeau.

With all those losses it would seem the Pirates have too big and too many holes to fill in the starting lineup, but the Pirates had one of the best junior varsity units in the district last season. They hope to promote at least two of those along with the seventh man off the reserve unit of last year's team into starting positions.

Returning besides "jumping Jack" Nunn, is center Steve McElyea, the player most overlooked last season but one to keep in mind when the Pirates unveil their laurels for the '68-'69 season.

Coach Hart hopes for help from Terry Lape, a player part of last season who returned for another shot this season. It's a lot of ifs for the Pirates, including the injuries suffered by his only returning starters.

Nunn had a knee operation this summer and will not be ready for starting duty for the Pirates until Christmas. The Pirates will have to do without him for seven games.

Another injury problem is that of McElyea, who injured an ankle earlier in the school year. The injury hasn't mended as well as Coach Hart hoped.

So with these two problems and a number of positions to fill, the Pirates may have their problems early in the season. They will have those sights set on another journey to Columbia and in those sights are Delta and Scott Central, two perennial powers in class S this season.

Whatever the season brings, the 1968 state champions will long be remembered as the team which broke the 11-year hex against Southeast Missouri being the top basketball spot in the state.

It's been a winner at Matthews since the arrival of Coach Hart whose teams have accumulated a winning record of 65-3. One thing is for sure, the Pirates are to be reckoned with again this season, especially with the winner Coach Hart has turned out at MHS. He came to Pirate town after a .500 season before and building the record to 30 and 2 his first season.

Mickey Lolich had two major problems before he went out to get the Tigers even in the second game of the World Series - keeping his mouth shut and his eyes open.

He managed to do the second, but not the first, and that's how the 28-year-old Detroit pitcher became the hero of Thursday's game as he scattered six hits and hit the first homer of his career in an 8-1 victory over St. Louis that tied the series at one victory apiece.

Lolich's problems stemmed from a groin infection he first noticed Wednesday night. And, as soon as he got to the ball park Thursday, he reported to the team doctor.

For the next couple of hours, whenever Lolich opened his mouth someone either shoved in a thermometer or some pills. The pills, in turn, were beginning to put him to sleep.

"I was quite groggy from the pills," Lolich explained. "The doctor said my eyes looked like they were going to sleep. He said I might run out of gas in the middle of the game and that I might get a headache at any time."

"I didn't get the headache. But I was woozy all day."

However, Lolich claimed the situation only served to make him a more effective pitcher.

"What happened because of that was I was so concerned about the infection I had no chance to be nervous and with all those pills making me groggy and the energy out of my body, I was completely relaxed."

"Another thing was that I didn't have enough energy to throw as hard as I usually do and as a result my fastball was sinking more."

The fun - loving motorcycle enthusiast, who has five bikes and a 1 1/2 - mile track on a plot of land near his home, told how he became a lefthander as the result of a childhood accident.

"I drove my tricycle off a curve and hit the kickstand of a parked motorcycle," Lolich explained. "The bike came down on top of me and I was pinned with it on my chest. I survived."

With the left collarbone broken and his arm getting little use, he was told to continually exercise his left arm to strengthen it. That turned him into a southpaw pitcher.

Lolich posted a 17-9 record this year. But while he still never has won 20, he now has hit his first homer.

The homer came in the third inning and not only startled the crowd of 54,692 but Lolich as well. As the ball sailed into the left field stands, Lolich passed first base. But he had to make a return trip because he had failed to touch the bag.

"When I got to the bench," Lolich said with a smile, "everyone shook my hand, but no one said anything. They just sat down shaking their heads. I guess I'm so much of a punch - and - judy hitter it seemed sort of ridiculous to them."

"I don't hit homers. As a matter of fact, I don't hit."

But he does pitch. Even when he's falling asleep.

Rarely has the Big Eight Conference been favored by such a dramatic early show of football strength as that which appears in the offing Saturday when Kansas invades Nebraska.

Both teams are 3-0 and ranked in the Top 10 nationally. Nebraska, idle last Saturday, has been tough defensively in beating Wyoming, Utah and Minnesota.

Kansas annihilated Mexico, 68-7, Saturday for victory No. 3.

In three games, the Jayhawks have scored 153 points, an average of 51 per game. Oklahoma set the Big Eight record with 46 points in 1956, an average of 46.6 for 10 games.

Colorado took the early conference lead by putting down an Iowa State rally for a 2-18 triumph Saturday at Ames.

Missouri survived its own bobbling to edge Army, 7-3. Kansas State continued to flex its muscles, downing Virginia Tech, 34-19, and Oklahoma State lost to Texas, 31-3.

Oklahoma, like Nebraska, had an open date awaiting its battle this week with Texas in Dallas' Cotton Bowl.

In other conference games this week, Iowa State is at Kansas State and Colorado at Missouri. Oklahoma State has a non-league date at Houston.

Kansas Coach Pepper Rodgers, whose Jayhawks are off to their best start since 1952, worried about the score against New Mexico, but professed not to be worrying about Nebraska - yet.

"I'd hate to be on the other side," Rodgers said of the Hawks' 10-touchdown barrage, "but there's nothing you can do when everyone plays." Rodgers used 52 players, but even kicker Bill Bell drove the Hawks 65 yards to a late touchdown even though he hadn't practiced at quarterback this fall.

"Our kids won't be thinking about Nebraska," Rodgers quipped. "They're just thinking about girls."

Bobby Douglass passed for two KU touchdowns and ran for two more.

Bob Anerson gained 247 yards rushing and passing in pacing Colorado's victory over Iowa State. He hit 11 of 16 passes for 161 yards and carried 24 times for 86 yards. However, Sammy Davis' 85-yard kickoff return ignited a late Cyclone rally that scared the Buffaloes, who had built a 21-0 lead.

Missouri's Dan Devine got his 100th career coaching victory, even though the Tigers lost the ball six times on interceptions and three times on fumbles. Roger Wehrli's 53-yard punt return set up Missouri's touchdown.

Mack Herron accounted for 22 yards for Kansas State. He returned the second half kickoff 99-yards, ran 76 yards for another TD and passed for a third touchdown.

Oklahoma State managed only Bob Cutbush's 33-yard field goal against Texas.

Rodgers' first Kansas offensive team scored five of the six times it had the football. Reserve quarterback Jim Ettinger relieved Douglass and scored one touchdown himself and passed for another.

Kansas rolled up 541 yards total offense and 28 first downs, while holding New Mexico to 127 yards and 10 first downs. Kansas' yardage was so evenly distributed that Junior Riggins led the rushing with 68 yards on 10 carries and Douglass topped the passing by hitting 8 of 12 for 105 yards.

Devine was happy, but said, "Obviously, you can't give the ball away as much as we did and score points. I thought at any time we were going to break open, but we just never got the big play to do it."

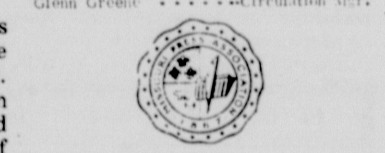

Missouri had the ball inside the Army 30-yard line seven times when the Tigers did not score. Terry McMillan threw interceptions with Missouri threatening from the Army two and 20 yard lines in the first quarter, and later the Tigers lost the ball on downs at the Cadet one.

A crowd of 58,576—billed as the largest ever to watch an athletic event in Missouri—watched the game.

Sikeston, Mo.

EFFUS, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes Saturday night pledged continuing progress in Missouri government if he is re-elected to a second term.

"When I was inaugurated nearly four years ago," he said, "I promised that I would bring new faces, new ideas and a new era to Missouri."

"I have tried to live up to that promise in education, in improving social and economic opportunity, in an expanded health and welfare program and in industrial growth."

"I would like to repeat that promise tonight. I promise you that no matter what the task, no matter what the goals, we shall have progress in Missouri so long as I am governor."

The governor made his pledge in a speech prepared for a Jefferson County Democratic rally and dinner.

He devoted most of his speech to progress that has been made in education and outlined these goals for the future:

More junior college districts, expanded vocational - technical training, further revision of the school foundation program as needed, including 30-50 state aid in operations and state sharing in school building costs, sharply increased teachers' salaries and further improvement in the teachers' retirement program.

Homicide Rated Easiest Crime to Get Away With

Claude Lee Dies in West

LAKE OZARK, Mo. (AP) — Homicide, in Missouri, is "the easiest type of crime to commit and get away with."

That was the view of Raymond I. Harris, St. Louis County coroner, in a speech prepared for Atty. Gen. Norman H. Anderson's seminar for law enforcement officials.

"In Missouri," Harris said Saturday, "a perfect murder can be committed, not because the crime itself is perfect, but because of the imperfection of the investigation."

He said at least one homicide a day occurs in Missouri that is not being discovered, or if discovered, the guilty person is not being apprehended, indicted, or convicted. And if convicted, the person is later released on appeal.

Harris said the trouble is not in law enforcement but in inadequate laws. The legislature, he said, must take steps "to bring Missouri out of the Middle Ages into modern day science in the field of death investigation."

Harris urged a three-fold legislative program:

1. Establishment of a statewide medical examiner's office.
2. Adequate toxicology and chemistry laboratories, staffed with disqualified personnel, should be set up throughout the state to aid law enforcement officials.

3. Officials must be given greater authority to perform autopsies and other post mortem examinations to aid in establishing causes of deaths and the circumstances surrounding them.

Retired Advance Farmer Dies

ADVANCE — A retired farmer and blacksmith, Jesse Elmer Leazenby, 87, died Friday in a Cape Girardeau hospital after an illness.

Leazenby was born Oct. 19, 1880, in White County, Indiana. On June 19, 1910, he married Maggie Uphoff, who preceded him in death in 1967.

He is survived by a son, George Leazenby, Lincoln Park, Mich.; a daughter, Mrs. Lawrence Graham, Cape Girardeau; a sister, Mrs. Louvina Christy, Chaffee; six grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren.

The body is at Morgan Funeral Home where services will be Sunday at 2 p.m. by the Rev. Frank Heidman, pastor of the Advance Assembly of God Church.

Burial will be in Pleasant Hill cemetery.

Killed In Vietnam

MATTESE — Sp4 Douglas E. Gossage, 19, nephew of Gene and Harry Buckles and Mrs. Lela Martin of Sikeston, was killed Sept. 28, in South Vietnam, near the demilitarized zone.

He was killed by enemy fire, when a helicopter with which he was attached with first air division, was shot down.

A graduate of Lindbergh high school in St. Louis he enlisted in the army last October and volunteered for helicopter training in Virginia, after receiving his basic training at Ft. Leonard Wood.

A son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gossage, he has been in Vietnam since June.

Surviving besides his parents are two sisters, Sharon and Robin, and three brothers, Steven, Gregory and David Gossage, all of Mattese; and his grandparents, Earl and Julia Stacy, Sikeston.

Services were today at Michael Fitzgerald Mortuary, on Linbergh boulevard in St. Louis.

Hearnes Urges Women to Get Facts to Voters

FESTUS, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes Saturday night pledged continuing progress in Missouri government if he is re-elected to a second term.

"When I was inaugurated nearly four years ago," he said, "I promised that I would bring new faces, new ideas and a new era to Missouri."

"I have tried to live up to that promise in education, in improving social and economic opportunity, in an expanded health and welfare program and in industrial growth."

"I would like to repeat that promise tonight, I promise you that no matter what the task, no matter what the goals, we shall have progress in Missouri so long as I am governor."

The governor made his pledge in a speech prepared for a Jefferson County Democratic rally and dinner.

He devoted most of his speech to progress that has been made in education and outlined these goals for the future:

More junior college districts, expanded vocational - technical training, further revision of the school foundation program as needed, including 50-50 state aid in operations and state sharing in school building costs, sharply increased teachers' salaries and further improvement in the teachers' retirement program.

Curran Rites

CHARLESTON — Ulys G. Curran, elderly resident of Charleston, died Saturday at 9:10 a.m. in the Missouri Delta Community hospital, Sikeston.

He was born in Haywood County, Tenn., and had been a resident of Charleston for the past 30 years. He was a retired railroad employee.

Surviving are one son, Walter B. Curran, Chicago, and one brother, Marshall Curran, Charleston.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday in the Sparks Funeral Chapel with the Rev. E. W. Wallace officiating.

Burial will be in the Oak Grove cemetery.

E. Earl Arthur, 70, 4 Beard Drive, died Sunday at 1 a.m. in the Missouri Delta Community hospital, after a short illness.

He was born in Bessville, Nov. 22, 1897, son of Edsel and Sarah Arthur.

A veteran of World War I, where he served in the Navy, he was a retired vice president of Weyerhaeuser Lumber and Plywood division, Tacoma. He worked for the lumber company more than 30 years.

A graduate of Sikeston high school, he entered Westminster college, Fulton, prior to enlisting in the navy.

He was a member of the First Methodist church and the Lions club.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Oma Mae Scott Arthur; one stepson, E. L. Tongate Jr., Sikeston; and three stepchildren.

Services will be in the Welsh Funeral Chapel, Tuesday at 2 p.m., with the Rev. Joseph H. Wagner, pastor of First Methodist church, officiating.

Burial will be in Memorial Park cemetery.

Jerry Johnson

Rites Wednesday

CHARLESTON — Services for Jerry Johnson will be at 2 p.m. Wednesday at Mercy Seat Baptist church with the Rev. W. M. Vaughn officiating. Burial will be in Oak Grove Cemetery with Sparks Funeral Home in charge.

Johnson, 65, died Friday.

Homicide Rated Claude Lee Easiest Crime to Dies in West

Word has been received here of the death of Claude Lee, 62, of El Monte, Calif., formerly of Sikeston. He died Sunday of a heart attack at El Monte.

He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Truz Lee of Sikeston and was an interior decorator. He moved to California about 25 years ago.

Survivors include his wife, the former Cornice Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Davis, 419 East Kathleen; one daughter, Linda; two sisters, Miss Helen Lee, 727 Matthews, and Mrs. Henry Hurt, Diehlstadt, and one brother, T. W. Lee, Affton.

Services will be Wednesday at the Abbelem Funeral Home in El Monte.

Attending services besides his sisters and brother will be Mrs. Lee's brother and sisters, Mack Edward Davis, Advance, Mrs. Louise Masters and Mrs. Betty Jane Miller, both of Belleville, Ill., and Mrs. Sylvia Jamieson, Cape Girardeau.

Harris said the trouble is not in law enforcement but in inadequate laws. The legislature, he said, must take steps "to bring Missouri out of the Middle Ages into modern day science in the field of death investigation."

Harris urged a three-fold legislative program:

- 1. Establishment of a statewide medical examiner's office.
- 2. Adequate toxicology and chemistry laboratories, staffed with disqualified personnel, should be set up throughout the state to aid law enforcement officials.
- 3. Officials must be given greater authority to perform autopsies and other post mortem examinations to aid in establishing causes of deaths and the circumstances surrounding them.

Mattese Soldier Killed In Vietnam

MATTESE -- Sp4 Douglas E. Gossage, 19, nephew of Gene and Harry Buckles and Mrs. Lela Martin of Sikeston, was killed Sept. 28, in South Vietnam, near the demilitarized zone.

He was killed by enemy fire, when a helicopter with which he was attached with first air division, was shot down.

A graduate of Lindbergh high school in St. Louis he enlisted in the army last October and volunteered for helicopter training in Virginia, after receiving his basic training at Ft. Leonard Wood.

A son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gossage, he has been in Vietnam since June.

Surviving besides his parents are two sisters, Sharon and Robin, and three brothers, Steven, Gregory and David Gossage, all of Mattese; and his grandparents, Earl and Julia Stacy, Sikeston.

Service were today at Michael Fitzgerald Mortuary, on Linbergh boulevard in St. Louis.

W. E. Scott of East Prairie Dies

PAUL FLOWERS GREENHOUSE FLOWER PHOTOGRAPHY DESERVES INGENUITY
Flowers make excellent models, whether you are trying new photography techniques, or just seeking pretty color photos. They offer continually changing compositions of form and hue, from first bud to last falling petal. Now, with your garden in its late summer glory, is an ideal time to try your hand at flower photography.

For a very low-growing flower, try aiming the camera almost straight down, for a "bird's eye" view. To put a sky background behind a tall flower, hold your camera low and aim it upward. If you can't place the camera low enough, or if distracting background interferes, place a large sheet of blue paper behind the blossoms to simulate the sky. Film some flowers head-on at their own level, others from the sides or just above.

Contrasts of color will enhance your close-up flower pictures, such as a small bright flower silhouetted against masses of darker foliage, or the rough bark of a tree. When the sun shines on flowers from the back or side, it shows their texture and delicate, translucent beauty. You can capture this quality by utilizing backlighting or sidelighting whenever it is available.

In shooting close-ups of flowers or using close-up lenses (unless yours is a single lens reflex camera), the camera viewfinder doesn't show exactly what will be in the picture, because the viewfinder is located slightly higher than the lens. You can compensate for this effect, known as parallax, by tipping the camera slightly in the direction of the viewfinder after you have composed the picture. The closer you get to the subject, the more you need to tip the camera. The background in your pictures will be out of focus when you use a close-up lens, but this is usually desirable since an indistinct background complements the subject without distracting from it. If you would like your blossoms to appear isolated against a plain black background, shoot with flash. Or, hold a large sheet of black paper behind the subject and take a normal daylight exposure.

To make your own "dew", sprinkle drops of water sparingly on buds and leaves. Another idea is to have someone gently shower the blossoms from a watering can or hose attachment to give the appearance of a rainfall while you are shooting. On a warm summer's day, tie a tiny open container of corn syrup or sugar and water to a stem next to the bloom and you may attract hummingbirds or butterflies and bumblebees for some added interest in your photographs.

Use your flower garden as a frame or setting for informal portraits and at-home movies of family and friends. Scenes which combine flowers and people have a double appeal. When photographing small children in the garden, give them something to do, like smelling the flowers or picking them. Shoot at the children's level, or looking up at them, to heighten the visual impact of your pictures.

It's a good idea to take pictures of your house and garden during each season. Not only will this serve as a useful record of changes in your plantings but, should you decide to sell your home, having up-to-date pictures showing your property at its best can be a sales incentive.

If you are interested in flower arranging, you can make a picture book of ideas for arrangements. Take photos of formal flower arrangements and keep them in an album. Take pictures, too, of your own arrangements as a record and to help interested friends.

Nearly everyone enjoys seeing beautiful flowers - and even people who are allergic to them will appreciate a snapshot. The right equipment and a few simple techniques, thoughtfully applied, can help you to preserve the beauty of flowers on film.

A BEAR SITUATION
ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) - The black bear is northern New York state will have to face hunters early this season. The conservation department has announced a special early bear season from Oct. 1 through 15 in nine Adirondack counties.

Right to Work

FARM WORKERS HURT BY COMPULSORY UNION GRAPE BOYCOTT

Washington, D. C., - The San Joaquin Valley's Jose Mendoza arrived in the Nation's Capital today to tell members of Congress how farm workers are being hurt by the AFL-CIO's boycott against California grape growers aimed at forcing farm workers into compulsory unions.

Mr. Mendoza told a news conference in the National Press Club today that union bosses "have set out to prove that an entire industry can be destroyed unless it forces its workers to join the union against their will."

"For three years now, the AFL-CIO's United Farm Workers Organizing Committee, headed by Cesar Chavez, has failed in its organizing campaign. While they claim to be friends of the working men, Chavez and his AFL-CIO bosses are making the workers suffer because the workers don't want to join the union. The boycott has already cut the grape pickers work week from a normal six days at the height of the present harvest season back to four days," Mendoza charged.

"The root of the problem," Mr. Mendoza continued, "is California's lack of a Right to Work law. Compulsory union contracts, which are the goal of Chavez's AFL-CIO bosses, would be unenforceable under a Right to Work law. Since union bosses could not capture and hold unwilling workers without compulsory membership, the boycott tactic would be ineffective."

He said that union bosses are spending vast sums spreading "misinformation" in the nation's major cities, including Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Pittsburgh, Providence and New York.

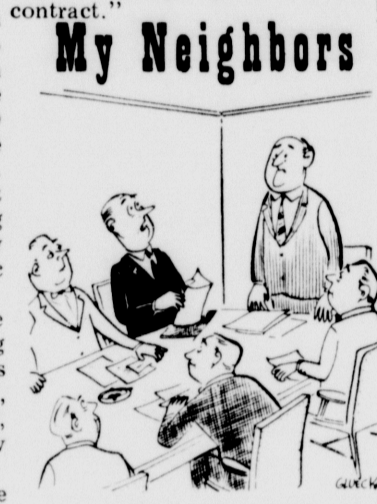

"The outcome of the AFL-CIO's massive campaign to force union membership on farm workers through a nationwide boycott of California table grapes holds enormous significance for all Americans as the first step towards compulsory unionization of all agricultural workers, thus putting our greatest resource, food production, under the control of a handful of bosses," Mendoza told the news conference.

Mr. Mendoza, Secretary of the Agricultural Workers Freedom to Work Association, with headquarters in Delano, California, said his tour is being financed in part from contributions of the grape pickers themselves, and the National Right to Work Committee, in cooperation with Californians for Right to Work and other state affiliates.

In summing up, the World War II Air Force veteran and former employee of Bakersfield Office of Economic Opportunity declared:

"The grape boycott is loaded with meaning... It is labor's opening move to unionize big perishable production... The entire power of the AFL-CIO is behind Chavez's union in California... The way the unions are operating on grapes is what's significant... They are putting pressure on food chains to discourage consumer purchase of California grapes. Chain stores are browbeaten by their unions to join the boycott... There is no strike of grape pickers, regardless of what you hear... The only thing Chavez wants is to get growers under contract."

"Sure, I was happy to serve on this committee but I'd no idea you'd expect work out of me."

CELEBRATE NATIONAL DOG WEEK: MAKE A PORTRAIT OF YOUR DOG

Pictures of dogs (and cats) have always run a close second to pictures of babies in their popularity with amateur photographers. A fact which, considering the natural appeal of both subjects, is not at all surprising.

And what better time to take some new shots of your dog than National Dog Week, September 22-28?

There is a world of difference, however, between a photograph that is simply a picture of a dog and a photograph that is a revealing portrait of your particular dog's personality. On the one hand, you just aim the camera and shoot; on the other, you plan ahead to produce the effect you want.

To begin with, take a few minutes with a brush and groom him so he'll look his best. If you want to capture his expression, you'll be working as close as your camera allows, and the details of his grooming will show up.

In addition to staying close, of course, you should, for best results, stay level. Shooting down at the dog might produce an interesting shot once in a while, but in general the results will be better if you, and your camera, get down so that you can aim straight at him. (Or, if he's big enough, up at him - the sky makes a great background.)

And backgrounds are important, as every photographer knows. The general rule about keeping them uncluttered still applies, but in pet photography there is also the matter of selecting one which will contrast with the dog's fur and show him off rather than swallow him up. Judicious use of backlighting will help in outlining the dog, if necessary. This is particularly effective when the dog has a long-haired, fluffy coat which light will turn into a halo.

For indoor, studio-type shots a large sheet of heavy paper makes an ideal background. Simply select a color which will look the best with your dog and suspend it from a basement pipe or wall so that it runs down and forward under the dog. The finished picture will have a professional look to it.

The proper lighting of such an indoor shot is a vital factor, of course. (An excellent discussion of the subject is found in The Fifth HERE'S HOW, Kodak publication AE-87.) Briefly, however, it is wisest to use floods or bounce flash than to startle the dog by flashing directly in his face.

You want him to be alert and interested, but not that alert! The effect you want can be achieved, simply by offering a bit of food, creating some intriguing noise (a rattle in a box, perhaps), or just talking to the dog. If he is a puppy or an especially lively beast, you might have to devise a way of containing him in the picture-taking area. This can be done by means of off-camera barriers, or placing him in a basket, or by giving him something to play with.

All of the

'69 Kingswood Estate 3-Seat Walk-In Wagon

Chevrolet introduces the walk-in wagon.

Here's a wagon that welcomes you in the back door without making you stoop over to keep from banging your head.

Now you simply walk up a step in the bumper and step down a step inside. Then you simply turn around and sit right down. Don't worry. We've slanted the back-end to help avoid the roof from bumping your head.

Another thoughtful design is our dual-action tailgate. Its concealed door openers won't catch a sleeve like an outside handle.

And another: You can specify washers for the headlights.

Still another: Tri-Level loading in most wagons. Order a roof rack for carrying convenience on top, in addition to the load space you have inside and under the rear floor.

Our '69 wagons also are big on looks and performance. One quick example is the new 327-cubic-inch engine, standard in many models. It's the largest standard V8 in its field.

Look over both our wagon sizes, biggest and big. Even the names are new. All at your Chevrolet dealer's now.

Just walk in.

Putting you first, keeps us first.

For a very low-growing flower, try aiming the camera almost straight down, for a "bird's eye" view. To put a sky background behind a tall flower, hold your camera low and aim it upward. If you can't place the camera low enough, or if distracting background interferes, place a large sheet of blue paper behind the blossoms to simulate the sky. Film some flowers head-on at their own level, others from the sides or just above.

Contrasts of color will enhance your close-up flower pictures, such as a small bright flower silhouetted against masses of darker foliage, or the rough bark of a tree.

When the sun shines on flowers from the back or side, it shows their texture and delicate, translucent beauty. You can capture this quality by utilizing backlighting or sidelighting whenever it is available.

In shooting close-ups of flowers or using close-up lenses (unless yours in a single lens reflex camera), the camera viewfinder doesn't show exactly what will be in the picture, because the viewfinder is located slightly higher than the lens. You can compensate for this effect, known as parallax, by tipping the camera slightly in the direction of the viewfinder after you have composed the picture.

The background in your pictures will be out of focus when you use a close-up lens, but this is usually desirable since an indistinct background complements the subject without distracting from it. If you would like your blossoms to appear isolated against a plain black background, shoot with flash. Or, hold a large sheet of black paper behind the subject and take a normal daylight exposure.

To make your own "dew", sprinkle drops of water sparingly on buds and leaves. Another idea is to have someone gently shower the blossoms from a watering can or hose attachment to give the appearance of a rainfall while you are shooting.

On a warm summer's day, tie a tiny open container of corn syrup or sugar and water to a stem next to the bloom and you may attract hummingbirds or butterflies and bumblebees for some added interest in your photographs.

Use your flower garden as a frame or setting for informal portraits and at-home movies of family and friends. Scenes which combine flowers and people have a double appeal. When photographing small children in the garden, give them something to do, like smelling the flowers or picking them. Shoot at the children's level, or looking up at them, to heighten the visual impact of your pictures.

It's a good idea to take pictures of your house and garden during each season. Not only will this serve as a useful record of changes in your plantings but, should you decide to sell your home, having up-to-date pictures showing your property at its best can be a sales incentive.

If you are interested in flower arranging, you can make a picture book of ideas for arrangements. Take photos of formal flower arrangements and keep them in an album. Take pictures, too, of your own arrangements as a record and to help interested friends.

Nearly everyone enjoys seeing beautiful flowers - and even people who are allergic to them will appreciate a snapshot. The right equipment and a few simple techniques, thoughtfully applied, can help you to preserve the beauty of flowers on film.

FARM WORKERS HURT BY COMPULSORY UNION GRAPE BOYCOTT

Washington, D. C. — The San Joaquin Valley's Jose Mendoza arrived in the Nation's Capital today to tell members of Congress how farm workers are being hurt by the AFL-CIO's boycott against California grape growers aimed at forcing farm workers into compulsory unions.

Mr. Mendoza told a news conference in the National Press Club today that union bosses "have set out to prove that an entire industry can be destroyed unless it forces its workers to join the union against their will."

"For three years now, the AFL-CIO's United Farm Workers Organizing Committee, headed by Cesar Chavez, has led in its organizing campaign. While they claim to be friends of the working men, Chavez and his AFL-CIO bosses are making the workers suffer because the workers don't want to join the union. The boycott has already cut the grape pickers work week from a normal six days at the height of the present harvest season back to four days," Mendoza charged.

"The root of the problem," Mr. Mendoza continued, "is California's lack of a Right to Work law. Compulsory union shop contracts, which are the goal of Chavez's AFL-CIO bosses, would be unenforceable under a Right to Work law. Since union bosses could not capture and hold unwilling workers without compulsory membership, the boycott tactic would be ineffective."

He said that union bosses are spending vast sums spreading "misinformation" in the nation's major cities, including Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Pittsburgh, Providence and New York.

"The outcome of the AFL-CIO's massive campaign to force union membership on farm workers through a nationwide boycott of California table grapes holds enormous significance for all Americans as the first step towards compulsory unionization of all agricultural workers, thus putting our greatest resource, food production, under the control of a handful of bosses," Mendoza told the news conference.

Mr. Mendoza, Secretary of the Agricultural Workers Freedom to Work Association, with headquarters in Delano, California, said his tour is being financed in part from contributions of the grape pickers themselves, and the National Right to Work Committee, in cooperation with Californians for Right to Work and other state affiliates.

In summing up, the World War II Air Force veteran and former employee of Bakersfield Office of Economic Opportunity declared:

"The grape boycott is loaded with meaning... It is labor's opening move to unionize big perishable production... The entire power of the AFL-CIO is behind Chavez's union in California... The way the unions are operating on grapes is what's significant... They are putting pressure on food chains to discourage consumer purchase of California grapes. Chain stores are browbeaten by their unions to join the boycott... There is no strike of grape pickers, regardless of what you hear... The only thing Chavez wants is to get growers under contract."

Pictures of dogs (and cats) have always run a close second to pictures of babies in their popularity with amateur photographers. A fact which, considering the natural appeal of both subjects, is not at all surprising.

And what better time to take some new shots of your dog than National Dog Week, September 22-28?

There is a world of difference, however, between a photograph that is simply a picture of a dog and a photograph that is a revealing portrait of your particular dog's personality. On the one hand, you just aim the camera and shoot; on the other, you plan ahead to produce the effect you want.

To begin with, take a few minutes with a brush and groom him so he'll look his best. If you want to capture his expression, you'll be working as close as your camera allows, and the details of his grooming will show up.

In addition to staying close, of course, you should, for best results, stay level. Shooting down at the dog might produce an interesting shot once in a while, but in general the results will be better if you, and your camera, get down so that you can aim straight at him. (Or, if he's big enough, up at him - the sky makes a great background.)

And backgrounds are important, as every photographer knows. The general rule about keeping them uncluttered still applies, but in pet photography there is also the matter of selecting one which will contrast with the dog's fur and show him off rather than swallow him up. Judicious use of backlighting will help in outlining the dog, if necessary. This is particularly effective when the dog has a long-haired, fluffy coat which light will turn into a halo.

For indoor, studio-type shots a large sheet of heavy paper makes an ideal background. Simply select a color which will look the best with your dog and suspend it from a basement pipe or wall so that it runs down and forward under the dog. The finished picture will have a professional look to it.

The proper lighting of such an indoor shot is a vital factor, of course. (An excellent discussion of the subject is found in The Fifth HERES HOW, Kodak publication AE-87.) Briefly, however, it is wiser to use floods or bounce flash than to startle the dog by flashing directly in his face.

You want him to be alert and interested, but not that alert! The effect you want can be achieved, with the help of an assistant, simply by offering a bit of food, creating some intriguing noise (a rattle in a box, perhaps), or just talking to the dog. If he is a puppy or an especially lively beast, you might have to devise a way of containing him in the picture-taking area. This can be done by means of off-camera barriers, or placing him in a basket, or by giving him something to play with.

We have a subcontractor working on our house addition, and we wish they'd assigned just a plain, old construction contractor to do the job.

'69 Kingswood Estate 3-Seat Walk-In Wagon

Chevrolet introduces the walk-in wagon.

Here's a wagon that welcomes you in the back door without making you stoop over to keep from banging your head.

Now you simply walk up a step in the bumper and walk down a step inside. Then you simply turn around and sit right down. Don't worry. We've slanted the back-end to help avoid the roof from bumping your head.

Another thoughtful design is our dual-action tailgate. Its concealed door openers won't catch a sleeve like an outside handle.

And another: You can specify washers for the headlights.

Still another: Tri-Level loading in most wagons. Order a roof rack for carrying convenience on top, in addition to the load space you have inside and under the rear floor.

Our '69 wagons also are big on looks and performance. One quick example is the new 327-cubic-inch engine, standard in many models. It's the largest standard V8 in its field.

Look over both our wagon sizes, biggest and big. Even the names are new. All at your Chevrolet dealer's now.

Just walk in.

Trouble-maker!

He is Johannes Gutenberg, the man who invented movable type.

Gutenberg had a hunch it would make a printer's work easier if type could be used over and over again in various combinations. Before his time, printers carved entire texts on large blocks of wood. Gutenberg, experimenting, sawed up one of these blocks into individual letter - units.

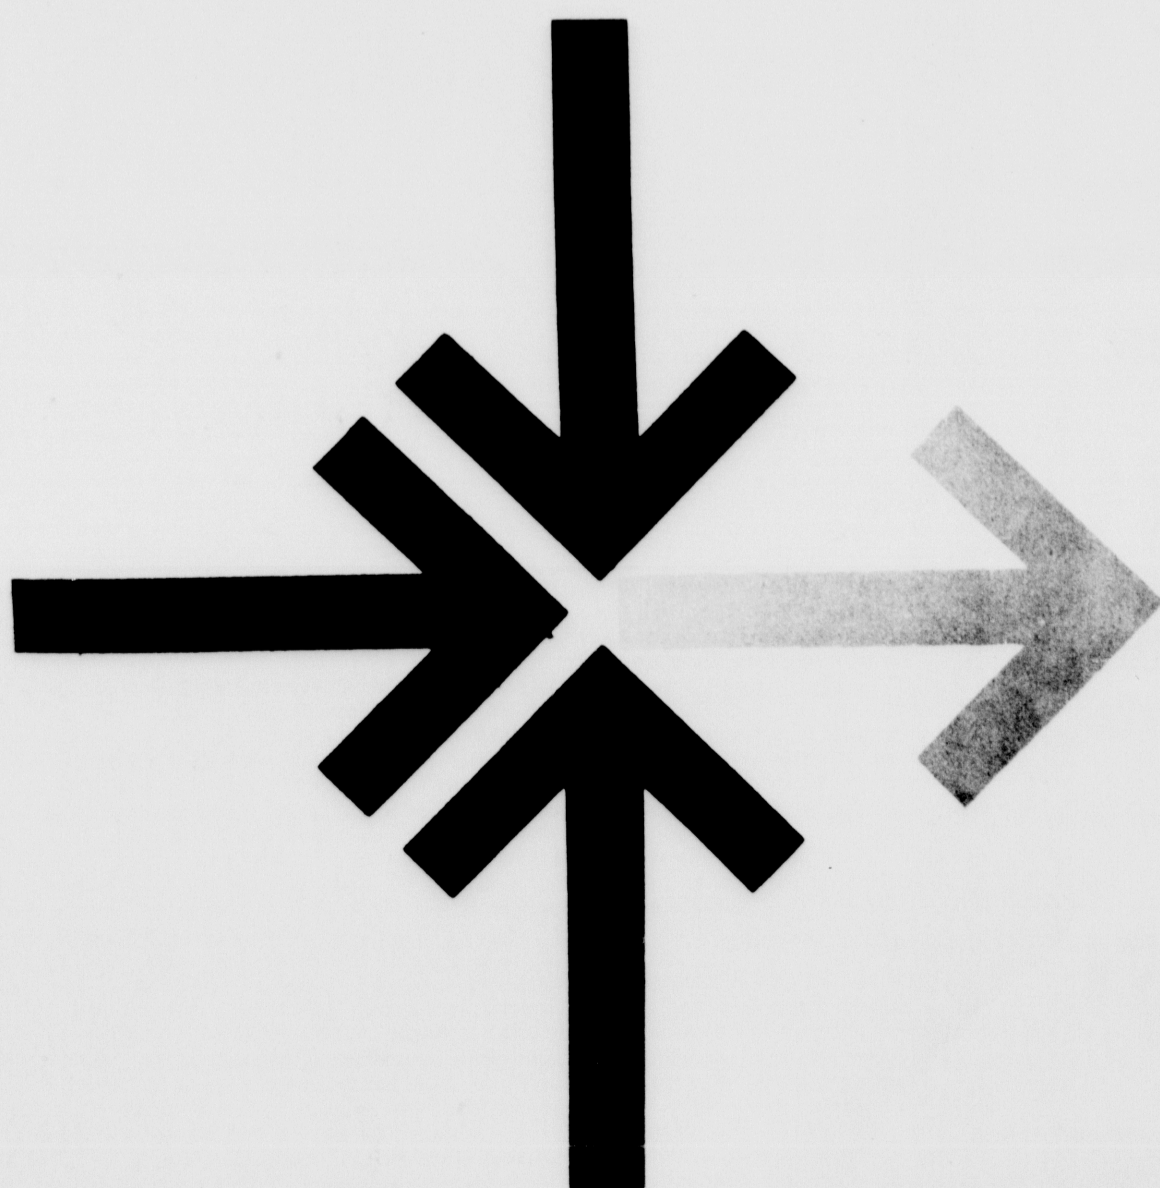

His idea worked. It made printing a great deal easier. But the ruckus it was to cause would have astounded this humble and devout German craftsman. For movable type not only simplified printing, it made possible for the first time the distribution of ideas to large numbers of people.

Under the interchange of ideas, serfs became restless, national states developed, and feudalism crumbled. Revolutionary trouble-makers such as Voltaire, Tom Paine, and a group of uncouth pamphleteers in England took ideas directly to the people. They found print was the ideal way to express complex thoughts. It was true then, and it is true today.

Printing made possible modern newspapers. Good newspapers always make trouble. They're trouble to officials who want to carry on the public's business in secret. They're trouble to anyone with entrenched authority. They're often troublesome to those whose private lives become suddenly caught up in the public business.

But the work that newspapers do has become a basic link in our political process.

That's something for you to think about during National Newspaper Week Oct. 6 - 12, 1968.

Polls Run
Since 1920

By The Associated Press
The first large-scale attempt to poll the electorate in a presidential election was made in the 1920 Cox-Harding campaign. The weekly Literary Digest magazine sent out millions of post cards as a basis for predicting the outcome of the election. Later the same magazine made a disastrously inaccurate poll when Roosevelt defeated Alfred M. Landon in 1936, and shortly thereafter it ceased publication.
All the polls proved wrong in predicting Thomas Dewey's victory over Harry Truman in 1948.
Despite this, political surveys have continued to grow in importance.
Every major presidential hopeful employs the services of his own private pollster, as well, and conducts his campaign with the polls' findings in mind.

To the Editor Daily Standard
Sikeston, Missouri
There are so many things said about college education, to me that is something as of a far distant land, never to be visited by me. I hardly finished the 6th grade. To me to be able to get a college education would be a very wonderful and very fine thing.

Education to me would be to broaden my knowledge, to do this would make me a person more considerate of others.

I have worked for 5 cents PER HOUR. Some people with a college education make as much in one week and I have earned in one year.

While working for 5 cents per hour, I was paying taxes to help pay for some of the colleges these young people are going to now.

I still do some things in my work today that these people would back up like a crawfish, and almost die if they had to do it. But I still pay taxes to help send these people to college.

Me and millions of others just like me, paying taxes so they can have a better life, and they toss it out the window like so much garbage.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Drop of Water on Knot Keeps Laces Tied Longer

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—To keep shoe strings tied a longer length of time, I place a drop of water on the knots immediately after tying them. The water makes the knot stronger as it dries. This is especially helpful for nylon shoe strings and for baby's first pair of walking shoes.

For small children just learning to drink liquids through a straw, I buy extra long straws, cut them in half and place the two half-straws in one cup or glass. This makes it easier for the child to hold a cup or glass, also it saves a lot of spilling as the child does not have to extend his cup out so far when the straw is shorter.

To keep my bathroom drains from getting plugged up, I keep a cheap pair of tweezers in the medicine cabinet to use for removing hair, small bits of soap and so on that accumulate near the drain. After removing, I place them in a tissue and throw into the wastebasket.—LUCY

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—I make blocks of ice in my deep freeze ready to put in our ice box when we go on a camping trip. I freeze it in an almost-square wastebasket but each time the side of this plastic container cracks open.
Can someone tell me how to freeze a block of ice the size of a small ice box without breaking the container?
I feel sure there are other outdoor sportsmen and campers who would like to know, too.—MRS. D. J. I.

DEAR POLLY—Our wooden flag pole was broken so we replaced it with an aluminum clothes prop. My husband sawed off one end, took the fixture off the flag pole and stuck it on the end of the clothes prop. Now we have a good, lightweight, unbreakable flag pole.—MRS.
C. D. G.

DEAR POLLY—I want to tell Mary that odd earrings can be made into beautiful bracelets. File off the clips or screws on the backs of the earrings and sew the rest on to a wrist-sized band knitted with gold or silver stretch thread. Pretty buttons also may be used this way.—MAUDE

That is the way it seems to me.

Every young person that goes to a college should have to look into the history of how this said college, the sweat, toil, worry, hardship time, and blood that was put into building these colleges, and collecting the KNOWLEDGE that goes into a thing like this.

Everyone that is lucky enough to get a college education should put his whole life into his work.

Not Rioting, not Protesting, life is to short to waste like that,
I think I could write all night but I won't, maybe more next time.

Curators Favor Medical School For UMKC

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP)—University of Missouri curators voted 5 to 3 Friday to establish a medical school on its Kansas City campus, if the legislature puts up the money.

William C. Myers Jr., board president, said the 1969 legislature will be asked to appropriate the money for the buildings in the university's 1970 budget.

UMKC could be ready to accept 32 students in the 1970 fall term by using classroom space in its new dental school, Myers said. The medical school could accept its first full class of 100 students by 1975, he said.

Myers said "there was no opposition to establishment of a medical school in Kansas City."
The dissenting votes, he said, were because some members wanted more information on the cost of starting a medical school.

Ann Landers

Druggist's Job to Fill Prescriptions Not to Give Massages to Customers

Dear Ann Landers: I am about 15 pounds overweight and have tried all sorts of diets which didn't work. A friend of mine told me about some reducing pills which did wonders for her.
I got a few pills for myself and took them to my doctor. He said they would probably not help me but they wouldn't hurt me and if I wanted to take them I could.

Well, Ann, the pills are doing the trick and I am thrilled. My only problem is the druggist. He refuses to give me more than six pills at a time. He insists I come in every four days so he can check my muscle tone. He takes me back in the stock room and feels all over and then says,
"Yes, you; musculature is fine.
No breakdown of tissue." If my husband knew about this he'd knock the guy's block off. I don't know whether or not to say anything because it may be that he is behaving in a professional manner and means nothing personal.

Please tell me what you know about this.—MINUS TEN

Dear Minus: I know that a druggist is supposed to fill prescriptions—not massage the customers. Get your physician to recommend some exercises for you and let him check your "musculature" periodically.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I have four daughters, 10, 12, 14, and 15.
Ted works 25 miles from home.
For the last two years he has been wanting to move across the Bay. He says the added time and energy would result in better commissions. Also he is dead tired when he gets home and complains more and more about the heavy traffic and the exhausting drive.

Whenever he brings up the subject the girls cry. They don't want to leave their lifelong friends. The oldest one is going steady. We keep reading articles about traumatic changes hurting children. The last thing our 15-year-old said was, "Money isn't everything."

Will you please give us some balanced counsel? Our kids have made us feel like morons.—SAN FRANCISCO

Dear San: Show me a family run by children and I will show you a couple of cowards. If in your husband's judgment he would do better on the other side of the Bay, he should tell the girls to start packing. They might love it. There are boys in Oakland, too, you know.

Dear Ann Landers: When you pay for an article and the change is under 5 cents, should you stand around and wait? I have asked several friends and they are as bewildered as I. It's a comfort (but no help) to know that others feel foolish, too—waiting for 2 or 3 cents. Yet, they are reluctant to leave because they are afraid the clerk will be insulted. Yes or no?—

NO PENNY COLLECTOR

Dear No. P. Collector: By all means wait. Offhand I can think of two good reasons: (1) If you don't wait you'll louse up the bookkeeper's balancing act. (2)
If you DO wait you'll have some pennies in your pocket for your next purchase.

If you have trouble getting along with your parents...if you can't get them to let you live your own life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems.
Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Soldier's Wife Must Give Up U. S. Funds

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

When Pvt. Jones was discharged from the Army, he decided not to report back to his wife. Instead, he took off for parts unknown and remained there. Also unknown was the fact that Jones was no longer in service.

Consequently, for two years thereafter, the Army continued to send his wife her monthly allotment.

Then, one fateful day, the mistake was discovered and the government started an action against Pvt. Jones' wife to recover the bundle of money it had erroneously sent her for the two year period.

"It's not my fault the army can't keep track of who's in the army," Mrs. Jones argued in court. "As far as I'm concerned, I received the money in good faith and spent it in good faith. If the government wants to get it back, it's got to get it back from my missing husband."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you require Mrs. Jones to return the money to the government?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that illegal payments by public officers of public money can be recovered from the person to whom such money is paid; that an overpayment of an Army allotment to a wife of a soldier or ex-soldier is an illegal payment.

Big Minh Returns To Saigon

SAIGON (AP)—Gen. Duong
Van Minh, who led the 1963 coup that overthrown South Vietnamese strongman President Ngo Dinh Diem, returned home today after nearly four years in exile, invited by a government that hopes to capitalize on his popularity but also fears that popularity.

The general, called Big Minh because of his size, returned from Bangkok after President Nguyen Van Thieu invited him to become one of his advisers.

In this role, the government believes Minh would strengthen the government by bringing to it the support of his fellow natives of southern South Vietnam and fellow Buddhists.

Newsmen were barred from the civilian terminal at Tan Son Nhut Airport when Minh arrived, but some managed to get through and speak to him just before he entered a government limousine.

He told them he was "very happy" to be back but declined comment on accepting the adviser's job. "It's too soon to say anything now. Today is for my family."

In keeping with the security and mystery surrounding his return, government spokesmen were saying as late as half an hour before Minh's arrival that he would not return until later in the month.

The confusion seemed planned. There had been some speculation that Buddhists, to whom Big Minh is a hero
because of his role in deposing Diem, might turn out in numbers to greet him. This could have proved embarrassing to Thieu since he knows he is less popular than Minh.

Thieu was not present to greet Minh, nor were Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky and Premier Tran Van Huong. A handful of lesser officials along with Minh's wife and a dozen relatives were on hand.

Minh said he did not know when he would see Thieu, possible Monday, but added "I must see him first" before deciding on accepting the adviser's job.

Though they call bringing Minh back a calculated risk many observers say it is one of the most astute moves made by Thieu. As they see it the government will benefit from his popularity and big Minh can be depended on not to rock the boat. U.S. officials are said to share these views.

If the Paris peace talks reach the actual negotiating stage, the political strength of the Saigon government will be crucial.
Thieu and Minh apparently have agreed, at least for the moment, to put their country ahead of personal ambitions.

Miss Mary Ann Gruen and friends from Kansas City spent the weekend with Miss Gruen's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Gruen.

A Petition Filed With The NLRB For Vote In Royal Typewriter Company

Donald W. Jones, a Springfield Missouri attorney, appeared before the National Labor Relations Board in Kansas City today, to file a petition for election at the Royal Typewriter Company Plant in Springfield, Missouri. Jones represents the "Royal Free Choice Committee," a voluntary group of employees at the plant, who want to vote out the requirement that compels them to belong to the union in order to hold their jobs. In filing the petition, Jones submitted cards, signed by over 30% of the Royal employees, requesting the election. He did not disclose the exact number of signatures, except to say that substantially more than the required 30% of the employees had signed.

Jones specifically requested assurance from the NLRB that all Royal employees be afforded Federal protection against harassment, and intimidation by union officials, or other individuals who might be opposed to the elections. He told the Board that some members of the Royal Free Choice Committee have already heard rumors that pressure and coercion tactics will be used to keep some employees from voting. Jones informed the board that he was promised his services to any employee who is victimized by such threats.

Attorney Jones stated, "The filing of this petition is the culmination of a four month drive by the Royal Free Choice Committee. This Committee of Royal employees has shown that the American desire for individual freedom is still alive. The Committee has done all of the hard work, and deserves full credit for encouraging such a large percentage of fellow employees to sign petition cards. I'm confident that the election will prove that the majority of Royal Employees prefer to be free to decide for themselves whether to join the union or not."

Margaret Marshall, a spokesman for the Royal Free Choice Committee, expressed appreciation for the assistance of Mr. S. D. Cadwallader, President of the National Right To Work Committee, in planning and coordinating the efforts of the Committee. Mrs. Marshall also emphasized that, "The Committee is not anti-union, they simply believe that working people have enough intelligence to decide for themselves whether the union serves them well or not. They should be free to make this decision."

Book Burning; Soviet Style

Complaints in Moscow of room that housed the older nationalist feeling in the Ukraine Ukrainian books. He said this was because the mysterious event two years ago room lacked windows and it was difficult for hoses to reach through a lone, small side door.

So much so that Soviet Nikolai P. Vizir, head of the recall of the event has been manuscript section, claimed the extremely naive and library still has 230,000 co-venient. It all points up Ukrainian manuscripts written before 1917. Other library world's Academy for the "there officials had said no such estimates for books were available."

The background: An arsonist set fire to a Shevchenko Manuscripts public library run by the Ukraine published in 1960, including one academy of sciences in Kiev, which had some incomplete Ab out 60,000 books were verses. "They had," he said destroyed, including a collection without so much as a blink, of Ukrainian literature. "Censorship in those days."

Ukrainians abroad claim it was inspired arson, to destroy works which still ignite sparks of anti-Russian passion. Soviet from a regional point of view and that a literary magazine was praising nationalist writers. The article implied that independence-minded Ukrainians were a problem.

So much for the Soviet mind.

GUESS AGAIN HEFTY HEAVE

Most of us find it difficult to lift ourselves out of a chair, but some people go in for weight-lifting as a hobby. Some of them get pretty good at it too! How much do you think one of these "muscle men" has actually been able to lift over his head? 200 pounds? 300 pounds? Even 400 pounds?

Guess Again, because a Russian olympic star actually hoisted 479 1/2 pounds over his head. This is the largest overhead lift on record.

HOW TO MAKE YOUR KITCHEN SINK MORE EFFICIENT Looking for ways to increase the efficiency of your kitchen sink? These four suggestions come from the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau:

1. Replace your old sink with a two or three-bowl type to multiply its simultaneous uses.
2. Make sure your faucet has an aerator. It will create millions of bubbles in the water that will cause soap to suds up faster and easier. You'll save on water too.
3. Get a spray attachment. One with a flexible stainless steel hose is now available.
4. Replace your old drain plug with a "remote control" stopper installed next to the faucet. It will end groping in the sink when it's full of water.

In 1964, 14-year-old Leonore Modell of the United States became the youngest person ever to swim the English Channel. Her time for the 20-mile swim from Cape Griz Nez, France, to Dover, England, was 15 hours 27 minutes. The first person ever to swim the channel was Capt. Matthew Webb of Great Britain in 1875. His time from Dover to Calais, France, was 21 hours and 45 minutes.

SOUND--THE WILDER THE BETTER FOR AMATEUR MOVIES

If there's anything that will take an ordinary home movie and make it 10 feet tall, it's sound. You can show the most common-place family footage, but if there's sound with it, a living room audience will stop talking -- and look and listen.

A few years ago sound was strictly for the well-heeled advanced amateur who could afford the equipment -- and the time -- to make a sound film. But not any more. Background sound -- music or effects -- is now within reach of almost anyone with a movie camera.

Let's look at a quick and easy way to add sound to your movies. All you need is a record player or tape recorder. If you have a high fidelity system, so much the better.

The whole procedure is simply a matter of playing an appropriate record while you show your home movies. But there is one consideration -- the type of music you choose. Avoid anything that might be too popular. A catchy show tune or rock and roll beat that's familiar to your audience is going to turn them off the film and on to the music. Instead, use selections commonly called background music -- the kind piped through restaurant sound systems, into elevators, and the like. It sets the mood, but it doesn't take over. A little experimentation will show you how to select music to heighten the drama of a particular moment, to build suspense, or to add humor.

If you have separate speakers with your sound system, placing them in the right spot can add to the effectiveness of sound with film. If you own a stereo system, place the speakers to the sides of the audience so that they're literally surrounded by sound. With mono systems, place the speaker under the screen to give a directional effect to the music.

Once you've tried music with your movie you may want to create your own sound backgrounds. Again, this could involve an impressive and expensive amount of equipment. But with the modern cassette tape recorder you can be in business for less than $70. One film-maker used the cassette-type recorder to add background music to a highly professional travel film.

How you use the machine is perhaps more important than the machine itself. First of all, don't worry about synchronization. In fact, aim specifically for a lack of sync. One of the most effective utilizations of non-sync sound was in a film called "City coupled with a shot of the Cathedral -- can be terribly sights of Venice with sound that seems to come from somewhere off camera. A gondola glides by -- and you hear a woman calling to her child. The water shimmers in the sun and you hear the sound of someone singing. Suppose you're shooting a movie of your youngster's first day at school. Think about the sounds of school for a moment. Kids running, teacher's voices, the babble of a classroom, the excited impressions your youngster has of his first day at school, what he thinks of his teacher, and what he learned and discovered. You don't need a supply a mood. When you play the tape and show the film, you may find that sound varies from time to time, by a few seconds, with a specific scene, but it doesn't matter one bit. Taped sound is a natural for travel movies. The sounds of a street in New York, Rome, or Paris makes even the most straight-forward image take on a completely new dimension. Something as simple as a recorded conversation with a French gendarme giving you directions to Notre Dame -- movie-making.

You may want to take a whirl at more advanced sound-on-film techniques. Super magnetic sound projectors put near-professional sound films within reach of the amateur. A magnetic strip -- similar to the tape and show the film, you can find that sound varies from time to time, by a few seconds, with a specific scene, but it doesn't matter one bit. Taped sound is a natural for travel movies. The sounds of a street in New York, Rome, or Paris makes even the most straight-forward image take on a completely new dimension. A Petition Filed With The NLRB For Vote In Royal Typewriter Company

Donald W. Jones, a Springfield Missouri attorney, appeared before the National Labor Relations Board in Kansas City today, to file a petition for election at the Royal Typewriter Company Plant in Springfield, Missouri. Jones represents the "Royal Free Choice Committee," a voluntary group of employees at the plant, who want to vote out the requirement that compels them to belong to the union in order to hold their jobs. In filing the petition, Jones submitted cards, signed by over 30% of the Royal employees, requesting the election. He did not disclose the exact number of signatures, except to say that substantially more than the required 30% of the employees had signed.

Jones specifically requested assurance from the NLRB that all Royal employees be afforded Federal protection against harassment, and intimidation by union officials, or other individuals who might be opposed to the elections. He told the Board that some members of the Royal Free Choice Committee have already heard rumors that pressure and coercion tactics will be used to keep some employees from voting. Jones informed the board that he was promised his services to any employee who is victimized by such threats. Attorney Jones stated, "The filing of this petition is the culmination of a four month drive by the Royal Free Choice Committee. This Committee of Royal employees has shown that the American desire for individual freedom is still alive. The Committee has done all of the hard work, and deserves full credit for encouraging such a large percentage of fellow employees to sign petition cards. I'm confident that the election will prove that the majority of Royal Employees prefer to be free to decide for themselves whether to join the union or not."

Margaret Marshall, a spokesman for the Royal Free Choice Committee, expressed appreciation for the assistance of Mr. S. D. Cadwallader, President of the National Right To Work Committee, in planning and coordinating the efforts of the Committee. Mrs. Marshall also emphasized that, "The Committee is not anti-union, they simply believe that working people have enough intelligence to decide for themselves whether the union serves them well or not. They should be free to make this decision."

GUESS AGAIN HEFTY HEAVE

Most of us find it difficult to lift ourselves out of a chair, but some people go in for weight-lifting as a hobby. Some of them get pretty good at it too! How much do you think one of these "muscle men" has actually been able to lift over his head? 200 pounds? 300 pounds? Even 400 pounds? Guess Again, because a Russian olympic star actually hoisted 479 1/2 pounds over his head. This is the largest overhead lift on record.

Book Burning; Soviet Style

Complaints in Moscow of room that housed the older national feeling in the Ukraine Ukrainian books. He said this was because the mysterious event two years ago room lacked windows and it was still may grate on official Russian nerves.

So much so that Soviet recall of the event has been manuscript section, claimed the extremely naive and library still has 230,000 co-nvenient. It all points up the before 1917. Other library world's Academy for the "there officials had said no such are no truths" school of estimates for books were thought.

The background: An arsonist set fire to a Shevchenko Manuscripts public library run by the Ukrain published in 1960, including one academy of sciences in Kiev, which had some incomplete Ab out 60,000 books were destroyed, including a collection without so much as a blink, of Ukrainian national literature. "Censorship in those days."

Ukrainians abroad claim it was inspired arson, to destroy works which still ignite sparks of anti-Russian passion. Soviet officials say it was just a fire with a grudge.

There was more to the story. The re were reports—impossible now to pin down—that authorities forbade a demonstration two years ago before the statue of Taras Shevchenko, which faces the library across a downtown street. The Associated Press points out that Shevchenko, a great Ukrainian poet, was a bitter foe in the 19th century of domination of three Ukraine by the Great Russians. His verses still inspire nationalist feeling today. Annual Shevchenko celebrations are traditional.

The poet Shevchenko was a symbol of separatist feeling. He advised his countrymen to learn, brothers-think and read. Thus, the library and statue incidents are related. The fire was set, the records say, by a Russian Communist who co-ncessed to arson, but talks with library officials show continued uneasiness about political implications of the fire.

There are reports the fire took three days to put out. They say the fire was set by a library employee named Pegruzalsky, a graduate of the higher school of Maxism-Leninism, and phosphorus cones to start the blaze. At his trial last August he said he set the fire because of a per-sonal feud with the library director.

Pegruzalsky was not asked why he set the fire on the seventh floor in the Ukrainian section—rather than somewhere else. "He was sentenced to 10 years," A.P. reported. The entire Ukrainian collection was reported destroyed. But library officials said it was impossible to say how many Ukrainian language books were los t because none of those published before the 1917 Bolshevik seizure of power had been catalogued. Very convenient for the Russians.

Valentina A. Rezhnikova, the deputy director of the library, is quoted by the A.P. as saying: "The fire was not apolitical act. Pegruzalsky set the fire because he was moody. He did it with matches."

She said 60,000 books were lost but refused to say how many were Ukrainian. She also said there was no way of telling how many Ukrainian language books published before 1917 are now held by the library.

Feodor Z. Shimchenko, who identified himself as the head of readers' services, said most of the fire was out tw o hours after it started, but it took almost 12 hours to extinguish the fire in the seventh floor.

HOW TO MAKE YOUR KITCHEN SINK MORE EFFICIENT

Looking for ways to increase the efficiency of your kitchen sink? These four suggestions come from the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau:

1. Replace your old sink with a two or three-bowl type to multiply its simultaneous uses.
2. Make sure your faucet has an aerator. It will create millions of bubbles in the water that will cause soap to suds up faster and easier. You'll save on water too.
3. Get a spray attachment. One with a flexible stainless steel hose is now available.
4. Replace your old drain plug with a "remote control" stopper installed next to the faucet. It will end groping in the sink when it's full of water.
